The Holy See and all neutral nations also will be notified. An official statement from Vienna making the above announcement has been received here.

SHOW BOLSHEVIKI IN GERMAN PAY

KEEP HUN ARMY TOO BUSY TO REST, FOCH PLAN

New Pressure Northwest of Rheims Prevents Any Fortification

MARCH TALKS OF WAR MOVES

Expects Soon to See Encircling Move Around Metz

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Military observers here believe General Foch plans each phase of the offensive to reach some limited tactical position, while collectively the series of blows will serve to keep the entire enemy defensive line in a state of perpetual unrest.

Many officers believe this purpose will be shown more clearly as the winter sets in by continued pressure against the German lines all along the front, to keep the enemy from stabilizing his position and to keep his men from getting any rest. There is no question in the minds of these officers that the supreme commander is aiming at the morale of the German army by these harassing tactics as much as he is at advancement of his own battle front. Destruction of the enemy army, after all, they say, is the only certain way to military victory.

General March, chief of staff, hinted today at a continued offensive by General Pershing on the St. Mihiel front. At his weekly conference with newspaper correspondents, he said elimination of the salient furnished a better base for future offensive operations." No official reports had come, however, to show the course General Pershing is following since the two wings of his attack formed a junction and closed the mouth of the St. Mihiel trap on the enemy.

Iron Fields at Stake

Berlin reported officially that Pershing's men were feeling their way toward "our new lines" east of Combres and northwest of Thiaucourt. Just what time this referred to was not clear. It appeared probable tonight, however, that the line of defense upon which the Germans have fixed will be found well to the north and east of the positions held by Pershing's outposts at last authentic reports. It is not believed here, however, that the enemy will yield control of the Briey iron fields without a stubborn fight and Pershing is advancing directly towards that important region.

Discussing the American operations of the last two days, General March said:

"The old St. Mihiel salient was the first one that was established along the western front in September, 1914, and is the last one to go; the narrowest and most angular of all salients, projecting twelve miles into the French line and having important military bearing because it is across the railway of the Meuse valley cutting off Verdun from Commercy and Toul, and leaving only one single line, the one that goes out to the west toward Chalons. This salient was cut off by the American army in less than two days, parts of Thursday and Friday, by quick sharp blows on both flanks.

"On the south flank our troops advanced along a ten mile front between Xivray and Ley-En-Haye up through the undulating plain of the Woeve. On the north flank on an eight mile front, they advanced across the heights of the Meuse, around which is six miles wide, and broken by deep, branching ravines. By the evening of the first day, the south flank had been driven in five miles and the north flank three miles. By evening of the second day (Friday) the salient had been wiped out.

Shorter By 22 Miles

"The removal of the salient shortens—the line twenty-two miles, restores rail communication between Verdun and St. Mihiel and Toul, and gives a very much better base for future offensive operations than existed before this drive began.

"It is to be noted that the German communique says they withdrew quietly from this sector in accordance with a carefully arranged plan, but this does not cover the 13,000 men they left behind. They constitute the combatant strength of an entire German division.

"All reports from the fighting sections in France indicate the same high spirit, the lack of pessimism which has always characterized our troops in France, and everyone gets into the swing of it the minute he gets there. The quickness and rapidity with which they handled the fight at St. Mihiel is attributed not only to the fine staff work which brought it to a head, but

GERMANS LEARN OF THEIR LOSSES AT ST. MIHIEL

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 14.—The German newspapers are attempting to minimize the advance of the Americans at St. Mihiel, but the Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Volks Zeitung admits that "it is true the American attack was marked by certain losses in prisoners and some guns on our part." The correspondent adds significantly:

"Even if an attack on our position at the Chemin-des-Dames should succeed, or if the supreme army command should give up this area for other reasons, this would no longer have any significance for the strategical position, even if it were the matter of an area which has been so hotly fought over as the Chemin-des-Dames."

RUMORS RECENTLY AUSTRIA WOULD PROPOSE PEACE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—News of the Austro-Hungarian government's peace proposition reached Washington too late to obtain from officials an expression as to how it might be received. There had been some hints lately that an offer of this kind might come from Austria after the victory at arms in France.

ARSEN DONABEDIAN SHOT IN LEFT ARM IN MARNE BATTLE

ARSEN DONABEDIAN

M. M. Donabedian, 631 N street, has just received word that his brother, Arsen M. Donabedian, 346 Valecia street, was wounded in action in France on July 26. He was shot in the left arm and leg and on the left side. He has written another that he expects soon to be back in action again.

Arsen Donabedian was engaged in the tailoring business with his brother at 1719 Van Ness until called into the army on October 5, 1917. He went overseas in January.

LAND AT AMOY TO PROTECT CITY FROM REBELS

PEKING, Monday, Sept. 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—A Japanese destroyer has arrived off Foochow and British marines have been landed at Amoy to allay panic in those cities due to the approach of the southern rebel forces.

A Peking dispatch of August 27 said that rebel forces had gained successes against government troops near Amoy, in the province of Fokien and that consequently the government troops in the province were in a dangerous position.

Foochow, one of the treaty ports, is the capital of the province of Fukien, on the Min river, thirty-five miles from its mouth. It has a population of more than 700,000. Amoy 150 miles south of Foochow, has more than 400,000 inhabitants.

ENEMY COUNTER ATTACK MET BY U. S. GUNS

Hard Fighting in Lorraine But Germans Retire

MORE AUSTRIAN CAPTIVES TAKEN

Prisoners Impressed by Fact U. S. Soldiers Eat White Bread

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Sept. 14.—12.30 p. m.—(By the Associated Press.)—The enemy counter attacked against part of the American lines Friday evening and again during the night, but met with an intense and accurate artillery fire and recoiled. The Americans took a few prisoners in these attacks.

Hard fighting has taken place in the quarries northeast of Fey-en-Haye, where the Germans had placed one big gun and many machine guns in a well defended position.

Additional Austrian prisoners have been taken; native civilians said that they came in only a few days ago.

Artillery fire and gas shells were sent against certain American positions during the night, but they did little damage.

The Americans are organizing their newly taken positions rapidly and are pushing forward exploration parties. Prisoners and supplies are being collected and roads are being constructed in No Man's Land. Much booty and ammunition has fallen to the Franco-American Allies.

Prisoners and refugees alike are greatly impressed by the fact that the Americans are eating white bread, regarding it as a particularly copious ration for Germany.

Throughout the night and early today Pershing's men continued to advance and finished cleaning up the St. Mihiel salient. They cleared the forests of lurking Germans.

Prisoners make conflicting statements respecting German preparedness for an attack in this sector. Some say it was unexpected, others declare they had advance information of the hour and place of the attack. Still others expected it would take place on the 15th, and say that the artillery had been ordered to withdraw on the night of the attack. The post's command was being moved when the attack began, and therefore was caught unawares in the barrage. This apparently explains the light counter artillery fire Thursday morning.

A German prisoner officer is quoted as saying:

"The Hindenburg line in its present state is untenable."

YANKEE FUNDS TO FREE SWISS FROM NEED OF COAL

GENEVA, Sept. 14.—The Lausanne Revue states that the United States has offered to lend 250,000,000 francs to Switzerland in order to electrify the railways. Switzerland thus would become independent of German coal.

FRIGHTENS GERMANS IN ALSACE; AGAIN TALKING OF FLIGHT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—An official dispatch from France today says there are evidences of excitement everywhere across the German border and quotes the following from the Mackhausen Tageblatt:

"The American offensive in upper Alsace and the long range fire supposed to be intended to reduce to ashes the towns of this district is badly alarming the inhabitants. Even people of high rank, especially of the news like little children listening to ghost stories. Of course, the evacuation of Muellhausen and the whole of Alsace is again in question, and it is said that all measures for the actual evacuation of the grand duchy from Baden to Freiberg have already been taken."

ED STROWMAR, ONCE AT ARMONA, POSSIBLY KILLED

ARMONA, Sept. 14.—It is reported that Ed Strowmar, at one time employed in the county here, has been killed in France.

PETAIN STRIKES AT LAON AND GAINS TWO MILES

More Than 20,000 Prisoners Now in Pershing's Lines

GERMANS FAIL TO THE NORTH

Attempt to Beat Back Haig in Drive at Cambrai

(By the Associated Press.)

Marshal Foch, pursuing his policy of giving the Germans never a minute's rest, followed up the incisive stroke of the Americans, which wiped out the St. Mihiel salient in two days time by launching an offensive Saturday morning on the French front along the [illegible]

The blow was delivered [illegible] the German lines, pushing them back from one to two miles at points in this important sector, where it is well-night vital for the Germans to hold fast if they hope to retain control of any considerable part of northern France during the coming winter.

Meanwhile the process of cleaning up the St. Mihiel salient was being done by General Pershing's troops, who so far are reported to have effected the capture of more than 20,000 Germans as the result of the clean cut drive of the American First army.

There were indications in the reports from the front that the American success might have done somewhat more than straighten out the line above the former St. Mihiel bend, for the Germans were said to be retiring near Chatillon, along a front five or six miles to the northwest of the former westerly tip of the salient. This would probably tend to this in the readjustment of their line to meet the altered conditions.

Wide Front Threatened.

With the lessening of the tension on the St. Mihiel front, interest is centered at present in the French assault on the Ailette-Aisne front. General Petain's troops here were gaining ground where every yard was extremely valuable, as the German positions along the Aisne and the Vesle to the east has been under an increasing threat for some time by the French advance on their left flank. The advance will not have to be pressed much further before a German retreat on a wide front in this sector will be compelled.

By driving in sharply in his present move, Marshal Foch probably intends to make untenable even the Chemin-Des-Dames, the former German holding ground north of the Aisne. He has made marked progress already in this by taking Mont Des Singes, south of the Ailette. It is but a short distance thence to the Ainsey-Fuon line, the capture of which by Petain last fall compelled the German crown prince to fall back from the Chemin-Des-Dames to the Ailette line to the north.

The French progress here likewise represents a removal of the danger to the St. Gobain massif, and therefore of the citadel of Laon which that bastion defends. Moving directly into the massif further north, also, the Allies, the French are reported to be pressing satisfactorily.

Farther to East.

Along the Aisne the advance has taken the French some distance further towards the east, and they were early reported to have reached Vailly, on the north bank of the Aisne, pushing the Germans back from the river as they advanced.

The British front has held intact against a series of German assaults in what appears to be a fit of desperation over the inroads made in the defenses of Cambrai by Field Marshal Haig's forces in their recent progress. The British successfully beat off several such attacks at Havrincourt and Gouzeaucourt, holding their valuable positions on the high ground in this sector.

REVEALS KAISER READY FOR WAR EARLY IN 1914

Lenine's Revolution Managed From Berlin; U. S. Government Makes Public Convincing Proof

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Proof removing any doubts that Lenin and Trotzky, the Bolsheviki leaders, are paid German agents—if indeed any doubts remain—are laid before the world today by the United States government in the first installment of an amazing series of official document disclosed through the committee on public information.

Secured in Russia by American agents, these documents not only show how the German government through its imperial bank paid its gold to Lenin, Trotzky and their immediate associates to betray Russia into deserting her allies, but give addle proofs, if any be necessary, that Germany had perfected her plans for a war of world conquest long before the assassinations at Sarevejo, which as the world is now convinced conveniently furnished her pretext.

These documents further show that before the world war was four months old, and more than two years before the United States was drawn into it, Germany already was setting afoot her plans to "mobilize destructive agents and observers" to cause explosions, strikes and outrages in this country and planned the employment of "anarchists and escaped criminals" for the purpose.

Almost ranking in their sensational nature with the notorious Zimmermann note proposing war by Mexico and Japan upon the United States, which was first given to the world through the Associated Press, these documents lay bare a new strata of Prussian intrigue, a new viet of the workings of kultur to disrupt the Allies, standing between the world and kaiserism. They disclose a new story of human treachery for gold which might almost well be described without sacrilege as placing its perpetrators on a pedestal with Judas and his 30 pieces of silver.

Series of Seven Articles

The intrigue appears to have been carried down to the last detail of arrangement with typical German system. It will be revealed completely in a series of seven articles furnished by the committee on public information for publication each morning, beginning today, until the series is complete.

Not only do the disclosures prove that Lenin, Trotzky and their band are paid German agents. They show that the Bolsheviki revolution which threw Russia into such orgy of murder and excesses as the world seldom has seen, actually was arranged by the German general staff. They show how the paid agents of Germany betrayed Russia at the Brest Litovsk "peace" conference; how German staff officers secretly have been received by the Bolsheviki as military advisers; how they have acted as spies upon the embassies of the nations with which Russia was allied or at peace; how they effectually have directed the Bolsheviki foreign, domestic and economic policy wholly in the interest of Germany and the shame and degradation of Russia.

They show how a picked German commander was detailed to "defend" Petrograd against the German army and an extent of German intrigue and domination almost beyond the realm of imagination.

Originals of documents, photographs of originals and typewritten circulars, some of them marked "very secret" or "private" and many of them bearing the annotations of the Bolsheviki leaders themselves; some of them containing references to "Comrade Trotzky" or "Comrade Lenin" comprise the damning record. Some of the originals, it is shown, although deposited in the secret archives of the Bolsheviki, were required to be returned later to representatives of the German general staff in Petrograd that they might be destroyed. But evidence of them remained in the files of forgery and into the vacancies they fit perfectly. The Bolsheviki leaders themselves informed their "comrades" that the German government had required the return of the order to the German Imperial Bank depositing 30,000,000 gold rubles in a Stockholm bank for Lenin and Trotzky, and that at the same time the accounts of the bank had been "doctored" to conceal the payments.

The first installment of the revelations appearing today will be prefaced by an official statement by the committee on public information which tells briefly what the succeeding installments of documents will prove. This official resume of the disclosures says:

Documents Revealed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The committee on public information releases for publication herewith a series of communications between the German imperial government and the Russian Bolshevik government and between the Bolsheviki themselves; also the report thereon made to George Creel by Edgar Sisson, the committee's special representative in Russia during the winter of 1917-18.

These documents show that the present leaders of the Bolshevik government, Lenin and Trotzky, and their associates are German agents. They show that the Bolshevik revolution was arranged for by the German great general staff and financed by the German imperial bank and other German financial institutions.

They show that the treaty of Brest Litovsk was betrayal of the Russian people by the German agents, Lenin and Trotzky, that a German picked commander was chosen to defend Petrograd against the Germans; that German officers [illegible] secretly received by the Russian government as military advisers as well as officers in the Russian army, as directors of the Bolshevik military, foreign and domestic police. They show, in short, that the present Bolshevik government is not a Russian government at all, but a German government acting solely in the interest of Germany and betraying the Russian people as it betrays Russian allies, for the benefit of the Imperial German government alone. And the documents show that the Bolshevik leaders for the same German Imperial ends have equally betrayed the working classes of Russians whom they pretend to represent.

Seventy Documents

The documents are some 70 in number. Many are the originals annotated by Bolshevik officials. The balance of the others are photographs of originals showing annotations, and they corroborate a third set of typewritten

WINE GRAPE MEN PLAN TO BACK ROMINGER BILL

To Fight Proposed California "Bone Dry" Law

FIND CONGRESS FOR PROHIBITION

But Declare Effect of Law for Nation Should Be Awaited

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—A campaign against the proposed "bone dry" state constitutional amendment and in favor of the proposed Rominger measure, which would permit the sale of light wines and beer only, was planned at a meeting of the California Grape Protective Association here today. Both these propositions will be on the state ballot in November.

Members of the association agreed that no further action should be taken with regard to the national "bone dry" legislation now pending in Congress, which would be effective July 1, 1919.

An appeal was issued to the people of California to "express themselves forcibly in favor of the regulatory Rominger measure and against summary prohibition, which would make California, with her 350,000 acres in grapes, dry six months before Congress decrees the nation should be dry. We believe the citizens of California will refuse to discriminate against their own state."

Hilliard Welch of Lodi and E. M. Sheehan, secretary of the state board of viticulture, who headed a delegation to Washington in the interests of California grape growers, reported overwhelming sentiment in Congress in favor of national prohibition. Sheehan said the viticulture board planned to call the best scientific advice on plans for "salvaging" the California wine grape industry, so that the grapes may be used for purposes other than wine making.

Theodore Bell of San Francisco said at the outset of the war the President was clothed with full power to regulate the sale of intoxicants as he saw fit and that the passage of the state "bone dry" law would be usurpation of power delegated by Congress to the President.

NO IMPROVEMENT IN GERMAN FOOD

Workers Threaten Thereupon to Labor Fewer Hours

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 14.—Herr Von Waldow, president of the German food regulation board, speaking at a reception to the leaders of German trades unions, said he regretted the lateness of the harvest and that there were no shorter rations than were at present used to get more foodstuffs.

The crops, Von Waldow said, were only "so-so," better than that of last year, and that the potato crop probably was worse.

The provisioning of industries, he added, could improve from October 1. A full meat ration certainly would be restored, but he declared he could not hold out any prospect for an increase in the potato ration, as unfavorable weather had damaged the crop.

Meatless weeks must be continued, the speaker said, in order not to endanger the milk and fat supply. Unfortunately, he was unable to hold out any prospect of an improvement in the food supply, but he was positive that it would not get worse.

Herr Lenzen, a member of the reichstag, who was one of the deputation receiving Herr Von Waldow, said that in view of the noneless information he gave regarding the food supply, the workers could not continue to work the number of hours they now are working.

SIX ARRESTED FOR SEDITION

Williams was one of six people arrested here today on similar charges. The others were Mrs. Ida Forbes, Wilbur Glover, Joseph Vettare, H. P. Browning and Anthony Rink.

WOMAN TELLS OF NIGHT RAIDS

Martha Nelson McCan of L. A. Describes Rehability Work at St. Dunstan

"The women of America do not yet realize the responsibility that rests upon them in winning the war," said Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan of Los Angeles and Wahsington, D. C., at the Hotel Fresno yesterday afternoon. Mrs. McCan, a Los Angeles club woman, was sent to England in 1917 to investigate and report the reconstruction work being done there for wounded men.

While in Fresno Mrs. McCan attended the two days' Speakers' Institute. Mrs. McCan has the distinction of being the first woman ever appointed on a civil service commission, on which she served four and a half years. As she know Major L. H. Van Dusen of the war department, and as he had become interested in her work, he asked her to go in the ordnance division, to head the recruiting for civilian personnel section at Washington.

Arriving in London on September 1, after nineteen days en route and six days in Halifax harbor, Mrs. McCan was present at England's first moonlight air raid, and was in London during 100 later raids. She says that England is perfectly dark, for the Germans believe, "Where there is light there is life," and where there is life they bomb. These raids, she says, have no other aim than to terrorize the people into asking for peace.

"I will never forget that first air raid," Mrs. McCan said. "I was not afraid, for I did not know the danger. I was frozen with the thought of the nideousness of it. It was not warfare, but instead wanton destruction.

"In the first raid, in the basement next to me were 400 blinded soldiers, who had fought in the war and were trying to pick up the remnants of life for the future. Among them, cheering them, serving tea, laughing and talking, while the guns thundered overhead, were the women of the Volunteer Aid department, the V. A. D.'s. We were told not to fear, as, being in a part of Regent park, we would be safe from bombs. The Germans wanted only to destroy the larger buildings, Parliament house, etc. But the next morning, a short distance from our building we found a hole six feet wide and three feet deep, where a shell had struck and not exploded. If it had—well, I wouldn't be here now."

"The children in London," she continued, "are taught 'under cover' drills, as the children in our schools are taught the fire drill."

Mrs. McCan spent much time at St. Dunstan's, where Sir Arthur Pearson has established a hospital for blinded soldiers and sailors, and where the most marvelous reconstruction work is being done. Under the direction of Pearson, the men are being taught again to become normal citizens and to make the best of their handicap. Their condition—Sir Arthur will never allow to be spoken of as an affliction. While the maimed man has lost something of one value, he is taught to excel in other values. They are taught to swim, to run races, to row; they are taught military drill by a blind non-commissioned officer; they are given dancing lessons; they are taught stenography; they use the typewriter; they weave rugs, baskets or bags, in a course of six months, more or less, at St. Dunstan. Sir Arthur Pearson, himself blinded a year before the war, said at the time that he regarded it as a great misfortune, but now he considers it an advantage, for it has enabled him to understand the mentality and psychology of the blind. In the words of the founder of St. Dunstan, "The great endeavor is to persuade men that the loss of sight does not mean impairment of mental vigor in any respect, and only to a slight degree impairment of bodily vigor."

"It is bringing the men back with these handicaps," Mrs. McCan said, "that will take stamina and courage of our American women. When our men come back blinded, we must be prepared to meet them with no degree of difference because of their condition, and, above all, the word 'affliction' must not pass our lips."

While on her speaking tour in the United States Mrs. McCan is bringing home to the girls in munitions or other war measure plants that their work is just as much a part of the war as the work of the man at the front, and that they must not slack and hold back the speeding of the things essential to the winning of the war. After speaking many times a day, and in a different town every day, for several months, Mrs. McCan has returned to her home in Los Angeles for a short rest.

BUTTERFAT PRICE UP TO 60 CENTS

Butter fat prices this month are to be the highest ever paid here, according to the Danish Creamery. The price is 60 cents, and the checks going out for the past month will aggregate $75,000. The rate is 1 cent above last month, and every month nowadays sets a new record. Manager J. R. Murphy yesterday predicted a new raise for the October checks.

The price of butter is also going up. The wholesale price will be advanced to 57 1-2 cents in cartons tomorrow. This raise follows that which occurred in San Francisco Friday. The prices there are 57 cents in bulk and 60 cents in cartons wholesale. The retail prices in Fresno were advanced recently and probably will be maintained for a few days.

Dairymen Benefit

Owing to the high price of butter, the cost of feed is scarcely deterring the dairyman from producing more milk. While the season is dry now, the farmers are making greater use of alfalfa, corn silage and root crops. The cost of alfalfa at present is not prohibitive to the dairyman, and he is laying in quantities of hay of the later cuttings.

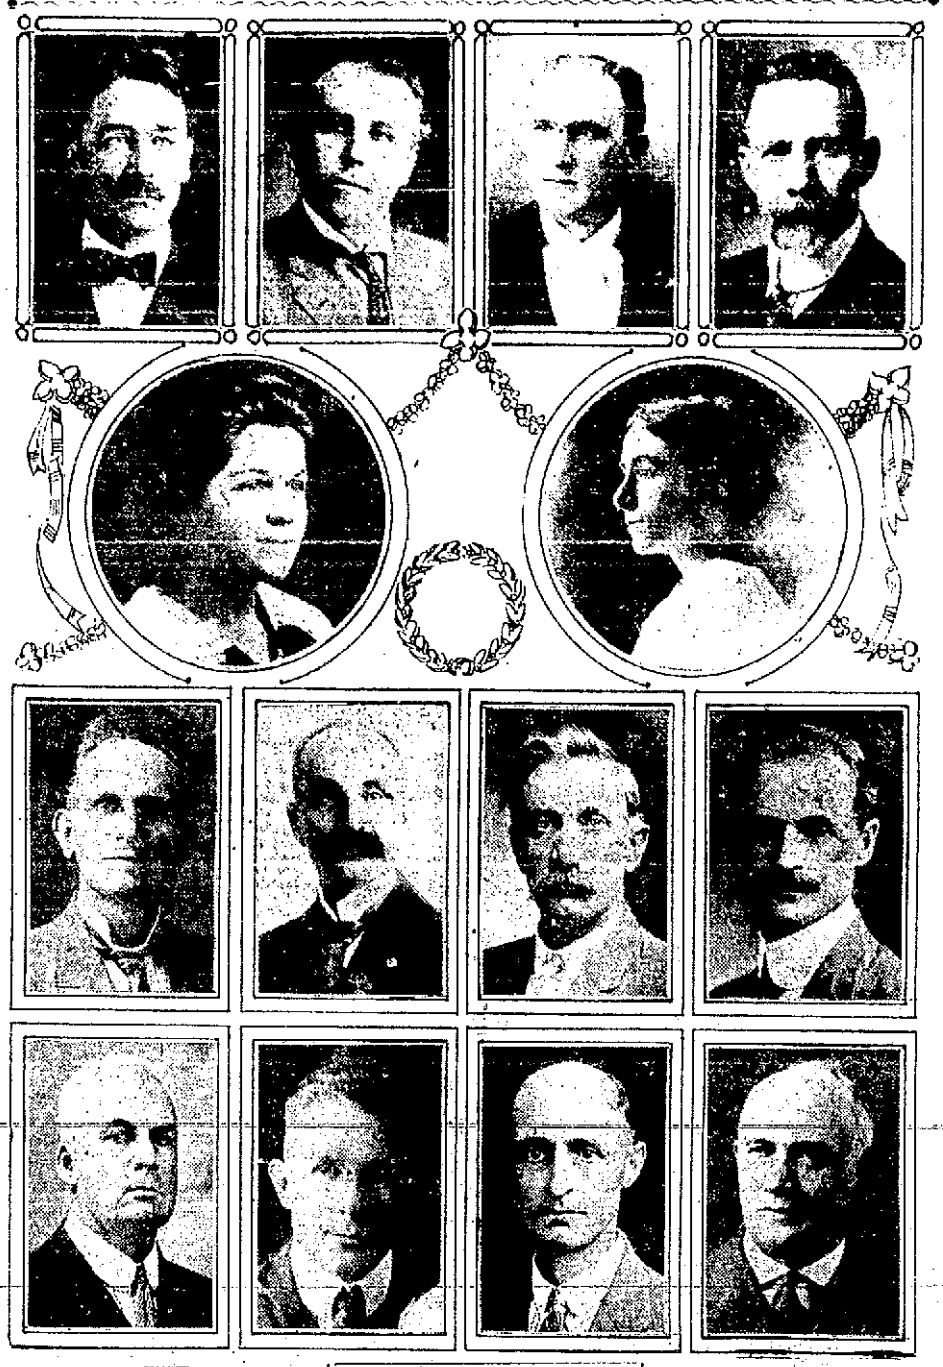
FIFTEEN FROM VALLEY DISTRICTS SEEK SEATS IN COMING LEGISLATURE; TWO ARE WOMEN



Thirteen men and two women have received nominations for places in the legislature from the San Joaquin Valley. Four of these seek senatorships, and eleven places in the assembly. Two of the senatorial candidates, J. L. C. Irwin of Kings and J. B. Curtin of Sonora, have been in the senate previously. L. L. Dennett, who seeks the senatorial toga against Curtin, was a member of the assembly during the last session. The only assembly candidate with previous legislative experience is Melvin Pettit of this county. The two women candidates are Miss Esto Broughton, daughter of a Modesto banker, and Mrs. Grace Dorris of Bakersfield, wife of a sailor now in the service of the navy. It is understood all of the candidates except possibly one favor a dry state. Following is a brief sketch of the several candidates:

M. B. HARRIS.

The candidate for senator from Fresno county was born September 10, 1866, at Albion, Illinois, and attended college at Indiana university and Wittenburg College, Springfield, Ohio. He came to California in May 1889. He taught school in Fresno county four years after his arrival, and studied law while teaching school. He has been practicing law in Fresno for twenty-two years. For several years he was chairman of the Republican County Central Committee, and also for several years chairman of the Republican committee of the congressional district. He was elected presidential elector for California on the Republican ticket in 1904, and was elected again on the Progressive ticket of California in 1912. He was also a member of the State Board of Education for a year. He is now president of the Board of Trustees of the Fresno State Normal School, and has been ever since the Normal was started. He was appointed chairman of the Four-Minute Men Organization when it was started and continued to act until the middle of August at which time a vacation was granted all candidates for office until after the November election. He is unqualifiedly in favor of the ratification of the national dry amendments. At the primary on August 27, Mr. Harris received both the Republican and Democratic nominations for senator.

J. L. C. IRWIN.

Senator J. L. C. Irwin, representing the 32nd State Senatorial District composed of Kings, Tulare and Kern, and who was renominated by the party voters of the district, for re-election in November, contends that his opponent, J. J. Butler, of Lost Hills, Republican nominee, is in virtually the same position that Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco finds himself in with respect to the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Butler, running for both Republican and Democratic nominations at the recent primary election is registered as a Democrat, but having lost the Democratic nomination to Senator Irwin, the latter claims that the provisions of the primary law debar him from being the Republican candidate at the November election. Unless an independent Republican candidate is secured, Irwin contends he is virtually the only candidate, having received the Prohibition nomination also.

Senator Irwin, after two terms as district attorney of Kings county, was elected to serve the counties of Tulare, Kings and Kern in the state senate, and is out for re-election. He is a native-of-Kansas, came to California nearly twenty-five years ago and has practiced law for more than fifteen years in this county and in the state courts.

He outlines his platform as being in favor of the federal constitutional prohibition amendment, in favor of legislation looking toward the development of the oil industry, in favor of development of water resources and where needed their conservation, and in addition he favors economy in state finances.

L. L. DENNETT.

Assemblyman Lewis L. Dennett was born in Oskaloosa, Iowa, January 15, 1867. He came to Stanislaus county in 1889 and has resided here continuously since that time, with exception of two years, when he served as government clerk at Washington, D. C., in the civil service. Returning to Modesto, he resumed the practice of law, giving especial attention to irrigation law, and he is considered an authority on the subject throughout the state. He is at present counsel for ten irrigation districts.

Dennett was supervisor of the 1910 census, having charge of the census in all the counties of this district, which afforded him particular opportunity to become acquainted with the conditions and needs of each. He is now serving his second term as assemblyman from the Forty-sixth district. Dennett is now associated in the practice of law with former Congressman J. C. Needham, with offices at Modesto.

J. B. CURTIN

Senator J. B. Curtin of Sonora has been renominated by the Democrats for senator in the district composed of the counties of Tuolumne, Stanislaus, San Joaquin, Merced and Madera. He was born at Columbia, Tuolumne county, May 15, 1867, and has lived in Tuolumne county all his life. He has practiced law at Sonora since 1892. He was district attorney of Tuolumne county from 1893 to 1895, and was elected to the State Senate in 1898, 1902, 1906 and 1910. Was for fourteen years vice-chairman of the Senate judiciary committee.

Senator Curtin was appointed tax commissioner by Governor Pardee in 1905 and reappointed by Governor Gillett in 1909, serving until 1914. He was the Democratic nominee for governor in 1914. At Sonora he is vice-president of the First National Bank, and of the Tuolumne County Bank, and president of the board of trustees of the union high school. He also owns one of the largest cattle ranches in Tuolumne county.

MRS. GRACE S. DORRIS

Mrs. Grace S. Dorris, wife of Sailor Wiley C. Dorris, was elected assemblywoman from Kern county at the primary. She won the Republican nomination by 923 over George E. Wilson, and captured the Democratic nomination by 55 from Wilson. These two nominations insure her election. Mrs. Dorris is pledged to vote for the nation-wide dry amendment. The Dorris vote is again a striking demonstration of the strength of the dry cause in Kern county. She was formerly a teacher in the Bakersfield high school. Mrs. Dorris was indorsed by the dry campaigners and made a most remarkable campaign, speaking at numerous county meetings.

MISS ESTO BROUGHTON

Stanislaus county has paid the same compliment to its woman candidate for the assembly as did Kern county, by giving her both the Republican and Democratic nominations. Miss Esto Broughton is 28 years old and is a native of Stanislaus county. She graduated from the Modesto high school and later took a degree in law from the University of California. On her return to Modesto she practiced law with Senator Maddux until about a year ago, since which time she has been connected with the bank of her father, J. B. Broughton, who is president of the Modesto Bank. Miss Broughton has been active in the Woman's Improvement Club, which she served as president, and has been prominent in Red Cross work.

Mr. Huebner spent his early life as a district school teacher and farmer, and when 21 years old entered the United States government service at Washington, D. C., where he remained for sixteen years, taking a night law course in the interim at the Columbian University (now George Washington University), at Washington, D. C. When Mr. Huebner terminated his government service he was an assistant attorney for the post office department. He is the editor of volumes 1 and 2 of Legal Opinions of the assistant attorney general for the postoffice department, published for government use by order of congress. On the recommendation of the postmaster general, congress appropriated $10,000 to continue the work Huebner had started, but he resigned his government position and came to Fresno to enter private practice of law in 1906. He is the author of a short history of the United States postal service from the reign of Queen Anne of England to the McKinley administration, which was published in El Postale at Berne, Switzerland, the official postal organ of the nations of the world, and is the author of several other published works.

MELVIN PETTIT

One of the four assembly candidates from Fresno county is Melvin Pettit of Parlier, who received a re-nomination, having served in the last legislature. Mr. Pettit was born 59 years ago in Ontario Canada. He moved to Michigan, where he resided five years, and came to California nineteen years ago. He served several years on the school board at Parlier and has been prominent in temperance work, as has also his wife who is vice-president of the State W. C. T. U. and president of the county organization. Mr. Pettit has one son in France and is an intensely patriotic American citizen.

CHESTER H. ROWELL, Editor and Manager

IN GERMAN PAY

A service not only to American participation in the Great War, but to world morals has been done by the official proof, now furnished by the American government, that Lenine and Trotzky are German hirelings, sent into republican Russia for the specific purpose of perverting the extreme socialist sentiment in that distracted land for the benefit of Teutonic autocracy. At the same time, the documents, now made public at Washington, give additional proof, if any were needed, that the starting of the world war was a carefully wrought out German plan intended to subjugate as much of Europe as possible directly to the Kaiser and to regulate the rest of the world according to designs drawn up at Berlin.

We have all suspected, ever since the day that Kerensky's administration was overthrown, nearly a year ago now, that Lenine and Trotzky were in the pay of the German treasury. The situation was somewhat camouflaged, however, by the fact that these men found it advisable to yield, in various degrees, to the ambitions of their followers, as well as to the innate honesty of purpose of the great mass of the Russian people. When these came directly in opposition, however, to the interests of the empire in whose pay Lenine had entered, Germany had to have its way. The gradual alienation of the mass of the Russian people and the great bulk of the socialist agitators who had, with the constitutional democrats borne the burden of opposition to the czar's government for so many years, brought about that state of anarchy which now is causing the murder of thousands in Moscow and Petrograd.

The utter conscienceleessness of the German administration can be given no better illustration, probably, than its employment in Russia of the propaganda of socialism to gain its own ends, which are the very opposite of socialist ideals. Nearly all honest theorists are in hearty agreement with the ideals of socialism. The opposition to them comes, for the most part, from persons who doubt their workability as a means of making people happy and efficient fellow citizens. The German government appears to have planned, deliberately, to make use of this unworkability as a means of destroying the Russian social fabric until such time as German "system" could be introduced to divert Russian wealth to German coffers. In order to do this, Russian morale had to be destroyed, and Russian social life so perverted that famine, murder and every conceivable social excess would be certain to follow. The malicious mind that could conceive of such an outcome and plan to make use of it, is of the same nature as the war purpose that would butcher Belgium because that was a convenient way to enter France. This is some measure of German governmental enormity.

INCIDENT CLOSED

Now that the town has had its laugh it is to be hoped that the Goehring chief of police incident will be closed—and forgotten.

But the incident should serve as a lesson in regard to the anonymous use of the "Business Men" alibi. It is already a familiar device with the liquor interests. Business men in their individual capacity should see that they are not misrepresented in their collective capacity. In their collective capacity they are not inarticulate, and in all matters where it is proper for them to act as such they speak through the Merchants' Association or other trade organizations. Where it is not proper for them to act in a class way, they should not so act, aand as a matter of fact do not so act. Merchants have their individual ideas as to civic, economic and political problems. They should see that their attitudes are not misrepresented by persons who seek to smoke screen their motives or their personalities behind the supposedly talismanic alibi of Business Men. And when certain individuals seek to speak for Business Men it is well to inquire just who are the business men for whom they are speaking and why these mysterious business men don't speak for themselves.

GO TO COLLEGE

All draft registrants who are high school graduates should realize that they are very much desired to serve the first part of their military terms in college. As we understand it, it is not necessary to have what is called a "recommendation" in order to enter the university at this time, but entrance will be open to any one 18 years old who has graduated from the high school. Boys will be housed at Berkeley in military barracks now being built, and will be housed at Stanford university in dormitories and disused fraternity houses. They will be housed, equipped, clothed and fed by the government and will receive a soldier's pay besides. Going to college has thus become for the first time a matter of no expense whatever. Boys engaged in engineering and medical and some other technical studies will probably be encouraged to continue those studies, but ordinary registrants will probably have about ten months in college, part of which will be devoted to military training and the rest to study along lines which will be useful in the military service. Some of them will then be put into officers' training camps and the others will be put directly into the army.

This is a chance and a duty for every young man who would naturally be going to college at this time to make at least a beginning of doing so without at all sacrificing his military duty, but rather equipping himself to do better service in it. What provision will be made for completing the education of these young students after they return from the war is yet uncertain, but it is among the probabilities that they may return on very much the present basis to complete at least a partial course at government expense. After the training of war they will know what real work means and will be able to accomplish in two years of college as much of substantial preparation for life and leadership as the ordinary boy accomplishes in four.

Illinois did well to repudiate Mayor Thompson of Chicago and to choose Medill McCormick as the Republican candidate for the United States Senate. Illinois has been curiously represented in the Senate, sometimes by men who were among the greatest statesmen in American history, and sometimes by jokes, buffoons or worse. Thompson would have been a disgrace.

McCormick, on the other hand, will be a real asset to the United States Senate in case he succeeds in displacing the spectacular tailor's lay figure, J. Ham Lewis, at the November election. Medill McCormick has courage, brains, practical resourcefulness and a very remarkable knowledge of national and world affairs. He was a leader first of the Illinois legislature and afterward of the federal House of Representatives, in which he is now serving as congressman at large from Illinois. There is too little leadership in the Senate, and McCormick will be a welcome and useful addition to that little.

FRESNO SERBS HEAR MESSAGE FROM NATIVE LAND

Pledge Jugo-Slav Support to Lieut. Vranjes and Wounded Comrade

Mass Meeting at Woodmen Hall Arouses Fervor of Fresno Slavs

With a stirring recital of the battle, in which the Serbians bore a valiant part with the French, recovering Monastir from the forces of the Central Powers, Lieutenant George Vranjes, member of the Serbian recruiting mission to the United States, urged the Jugo-Slavs of Fresno to support the United States in the great war, at Woodman hall last night. Vranjes said the Serbians are fighting only for liberty and union with the other Jugo-Slavs, and that all people of those races who formerly owed allegiance to Austria should rally with their bonds and their soldiers to fight the Hun.

Cheers For Hero

Cheers greeted the tall Serbian officer in his national uniform, with the tall cap and the red velvet collar, as he told how the critical battle was brought to a successful close by the rush of the Serbians upon the Bulgarians.

"We finally swept over their trenches," he said in Serbian, "which were eight feet deep and half filled with the dead and the dying, and carried their main lines. We suffered 20,000 casualties, but the Bulgarians lost 40,000.

Negroes For Freedom

"In the recaptured city a little girl came up to us in our gas masks. She was astounded to find some of the men negroes of the French service. 'Even the negroes come to fight for us,' she said." Lieutenant Vranjes said that no man of Slavonic blood should hesitate for a moment to enter the fight.

"Mikoil Milkovich, Fresno man who returned here this week after losing a leg in the same battle, told of the exploits of Americans of Serbian birth who rushed to the defense of their native land at the beginning of the war. Milkovich was an athlete and a fighter. He was one of the 120 men who had the hardihood to swim to safety when a ship carrying 480 men was torpedoed by an Austrian submarine in sight of his native shores. Milkovich will remain in Fresno.

A pledge of support was given by those present at the close of the lieutenant's appeal. Serbian music was played and Serbian national songs were sung. Layor Popovich was on the music program.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Serbian National Defense League, which has a chapter in Fresno, and the Croatian Union, which also is represented. Charles Jovanovich introduced the speakers.

Calls Jugo-Slave to Duty

Lieutenant Vranjes said, now that America has begun to fight for world democracy, the citizens of this country should, in the opinion of his countrymen, use rigorous measures to have all the Jugo-Slavs living here change their registration from Austrian enemies to Jugo-Slavs, and to assume their responsibility to enter the war for the liberation of all Jugo-Slavs. He recommended that some leading Jugo-Slav citizen of Fresno should take the responsibility to go through the cards of the registrants and have Jugo-Slavs who registered as Austrians change to their true nationality.

"Ninety-five per cent of the Slavs in the Austrian domain are rising in revolutions against the German masters. It poorly becomes the Jugo-Slavs in America to permit any to hide as slackers behind the claim of Austrian citizenship. For five centuries these peoples have fought against the hateful domination. No Jugo-Slav should be found wanting in this greatest crisis.

"We consider ourselves the happiest people on earth in our alliance with free America, and victory is certain to give us our desired freedom."

MAY SOON RESIGN

TOKYO, Sept. 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—Conservative newspapers predict the early resignation of the Japanese cabinet, headed by Premier Terauchi.

James Bonnar Is Gas Victim at Chateau Thierry

CORPORAL JAMES BONNAR

Who was taken to hospital as the result of being gassed at the fight at Chateau Thierry when Americans started offensive.

Gassed in the magnificent dash of the American troops at Chateau Thierry, Corporal James Bonnar, son of John Bonnar, 2022 Stanislaus street, Fresno, has written to his father that he is now back in the United States as the result of the attack.

Shortly after landing in France Corporal Bonnar was removed to a hospital with pleurisy, but latest reports indicated that he had recovered. He is a member of the artillery, and was stationed at an artillery camp in Texas before going to Europe. While in Fresno he was in the employ of the San Joaquin Light and Power company. He enlisted in 1917.

The attack on the Germans at Chateau Thierry was begun by the American forces on July 15, and on July 16 Corporal Bonnar went to the front lines, arriving at his position on July 18, and on July 19 and 20 he took a liaison detail into the front line trenches to work in co-operation with the 47th infantry. It was while fighting here that he was gassed, through a piece of enemy shrapnel cutting one of the tubes of his mask.

The letter to his father gives a picture of the soldier's life in France. It reads as follows:

"This letter will no doubt be a big surprise to all of you at home. I arrived in the United States yesterday. We made the trip across in eight days.

Over the Top Twice

"First of all, do not worry! I am all whole. As you know I went into the hospital in June at Bordeaux with pneumonia and very fortunately pulled through. I went to the front on July 16. We went to Chateau Thierry where the big American drive had just started. We arrived there on July 18. On July 19 and 20 I took a liaison detail into the front line trenches to work in co-operation with the 47th infantry. We went twice 'over the top,' and Daddy, you can't begin to imagine how awful this war really is. I saw things, and took part in things that under the stress of ordinary life would have killed me. I was very weak from my sickness at the time.

"On July 21 I went back to the battery position, which by the way was then advanced beyond where I had first gone over the top. That night Jacquith and Cooper, (my pals), and myself were sent out to string communication wire for our new position. About 3 a. m. the Boche sent over a terrific barrage, and we were caught in it. About one out of every four shells was a gas shell, and we worked with our masks on. Finally we took refuge in a shell hole, and all of a sudden I felt a queer humming sensation in my chest and under my arms.

Wakes Up in Hospital

"Soon I knew nothing. When I woke up I was in a first aid station. A piece of shrapnel had hit my gas mask, and torn the tube without my knowledge. From the first aid station I was sent to a field hospital and two days later to evacuation hospital No. 72, and after staying there about seven hours I was sent to the base hospital at Vichy.

"Evidently I had been sent there by mistake because gas patients were being sent to southern France. From there I was sent back to Bordeaux to the hospital I had been in when I had pneumonia. I was in pretty bad condition. My pleurisy had come back to me too.

"I was sent to Savenay, near St. Nazaire, stayed there five days and sailed from France on August 30. We came through a storm off Cape Hatteras, day before yesterday, that very nearly did us in. We lost six sailors overboard. The waves broke over the top of the boat.

"As far as I know I will be on my way in three or four days to Fort Bayard, New Mexico. From there I expect to come home for a short while. We are on Ellis Island at present.

"Well don't worry about me. Aside from being a little thin and run down I will be all right in a few months, and maybe go to France again."

Regular Traveling Correspondence by Barragero.—Reaching the Posa after a tiresome ride of forty-five miles across the barren lomas muertas (dead hills) at the head of the Panoche and Cantua, we were cordially welcomed by Mr. Kregenhagen, who, aware of my ignorance of the locality, kindly volunteered to act as guide to the important points in Pleasant valley. Striking west from Mr. K.'s store on the following morning, we entered the desolate gulch christened probably in derision, Pleasant valley. This gulch, is also known as "Alcade Creek" and "Waltham Canyon." Through twenty-five miles of dust and rocks and heat we traveled, finally reaching the residence of Mr. Crump, one of the oldest and most influential citizens of this locality. Close by we found a very neat school attended by eight or ten scholars. Mr. Crump, in his kindness, gave us several evidences of the benefits of irrigation by showing us a quantity of fruit, of which we partook heartily. He has utilized a small stream near his house to the very best advantage.—To be continued.

Twenty Years Ago.

When New Westminster in British Columbia, burned down the other day, Emil Guenther, the well known architect, concluded that the place would be a good one for a man of his profession for some time to come. Yesterday he received a telegram from the German consul at Vancouver, who confirmed this view, and tonight Mr. Guenther will leave for the North. He will go to San Francisco and take the boat from there on Sunday morning. The property losses at Westminster was $2,500,000 and the insurance amounted to $1,500,000, so there is sure to be considerable building when the ground has been cleared of debris.

Possible Showers Forecast for Today—An unusually heavy wind blow up last evening, which it was expected would bring rain. The weather forecast for today is possible showers.

To the Selma Fruit Company belongs the distinction of shipping the first carload of seedless Sultana raisins from the state this year. The car, which went forward yesterday, was sent to New York and was of a quality to do credit to the Selma label.

COMMISSION WANTS GOEHRING CHIEF

Nothing to Indicate That Situation Has Been Changed

Mayor Toomey and the members of the Police and Fire Commission will take no step to secure the resignation of John G. Goehring as chief of police but will rather urge that he remain as head of the Fresno police department, if there is nothing more to be presented against him than was presented at the "meeting of eight" on Friday night.

This was made very clear yesterday in statements by Mayor Toomey and Truman G. Hart and J. E. Davis, members of the Police and Fire Commission.

"This whole thing was started by a bunch who are sore because Goehring wouldn't let them make the town open," said the mayor.

"This matter came up in July, said Davis. "If the situation is the same now, my position will be the same as it was then, that Goehring should remain as chief.

"If Chief Goehring has resigned because of the pressure that has been brought to bear, I am not in favor of even considering it," said Hart.

It developed yesterday that all the talk of charges, made at the Friday night meeting was purely "hot air." George G. Graham, who was designated as the attorney for the eight petitioners, said yesterday that the petitions that had been circulated contained no charges and that aside from the reports that had been spread, there were no charges.

THE WORLD WAR

Only Partly Wrecked

AMERICAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 14.—(Reuter's)—The capture of St. Mihiel after its four years of martyrdom is regarded as one of the most striking incidents of its kind in the records of the war. The Germans left the town at 8 p. m. on Thursday. They had made life a nightmare for the inhabitants, who had been unable to escape when the enemy occupied the city. All the boys from 10 to 16 years old had been deported and the old people forced to work for the conquerors. The gratitude of the remaining inhabitants to the Americans was boundless. They were at last free to speak without fear of vengeance from the tyrants who had ruled over them.

The people had lost their ordinary war time look of weariness and the drive into this queer, wrecked paradise of gladness was a notable experience. A French military band had come in over the first bridge and was playing in the square, about which all the remaining inhabitants had assembled. Their eyes were radiant and their bearing that of prisoners set free. They were notably communicative and determined to treat as a hero any one wearing an American uniform.

Too Little Time

The town was only partly ruined. That part adjoining the river was almost entirely gone, but there were scores of houses elsewhere that had been scarcely damaged. The attack was such a surprise that the enemy was unable to undertake his usual work of wreckage. He had hands, however, on everything he could carry out. Sheets and blankets were torn from the beds and loaded on to wagons, but it is possible that those wagons at this time are in Allied hands, since the enemy had only twelve hours to escape from the town closing on the rallet.

Th enemy had set fire to a few houses, but the inmates extinguished the flames.

The Germans looted both the banks during their occupancy. The inhabitants had depended largely for sustenance on the food furnished by the American relief committee.

GOVERNMENT WANTS PRUNES OF OREGON

SALEM, Ore., Sept. 14.—Due to the fact that California prunes will be short as a result of recent rains, while Oregon prunes have not been injured, Oregon growers are informed that this state may be looked to by the government to supply the California deficiency. W. T. Jenks, manager of the Willmette Valley Prune Growers' Association is informed by the food administration that the entire Oregon crop may be commandeered. Previously it was announced that not more than 50 per cent of the crop would be required by the government.

CASES OF HOOKWORM BROUGHT TO LEWIS FROM THE ISLANDS

CAMP LEWIS, Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 14.—The first cases of hookworm to be discovered here were found this week, according to the weekly health report issued today, which says they were infected before coming to camp. The two cases are the First infantry, which returned from the Hawaiian islands early in June, and where the disease is prevalent.

The balance of the report shows the health conditions in camp are very good. The report says that up to midnight Thursday there were 29,965 men there.

Influenza continues to claim a number of victims, forty-five being taken ill with it in the past week, while mumps is next with twenty-two. There were fifteen cases of pneumonia, nine of measles, four of malaria two of scarlet fever and one of chicken pox. The report shows but one death occurred, that being from pneumonia.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—John Reed, under indictment as one of the editors of The Masses, was arrested by federal officials today, following a speech at a socialistic mass meeting last night, in which he protested against the sending of American troops into Siberia and denounced Great Britain as having instigated the shooting of Nikolai Lenine, the Bolsheviki premier. He was held in $5,000 bail. Reed promised that he would make no more speeches pending trial of the newest charge.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Sept. 14.—One man was killed and six were wounded tonight near Owen, in a pitched battle between members of the home guard and farmer on one side and two alleged draft evaders. Hundreds of shots were exchanged. The house of the alleged draft evaders was surrounded by a hundred home guards.

HAVRE, Sept. 14.—The American mission, composed of Congressmen Milton H. Welling and James H. Mays of Utah; James B. Aswell of Louisiana; A. W. Barkley of Kentucky; Marvin Jones of Texas and Charles H. Randall, made an inspection of the Belgian front today. They visited the sector about Merckem, where the Belgians had just won an important victory.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—President Poincare today telegraphed to President Wilson his felicitations on the American victory at St. Mihiel which had freed towns and villages in Lorraine after four years under enemy bondage. The president expressed to the people of the United States ardent thanks of France, and added an expression of his profound personal feeling.

INTER-ALLIED COUNCIL

PARIS, Sept. 14.—(Havas).—The inter-Allied naval council assembled at the ministry of marine yesterday under the presidency of Georges Leygues, the French minister of marine. Great Britain, the United States, Italy and Japanese were represented at the conference and the naval attaches of the Allied nations accredited to London, Paris and Rome were present.

GASOLINE FAMINE

HOQUIAM, Wash., Sept. 14.—The entire Gray's Harbor district is experiencing an unusual gasoline famine, which began to develop yesterday. Tonight there was no gasoline to be had for pleasure cars and very little for truck and auto stages. No definite promises of relief has been made.

UHLER IS BACK ON COUNTY AGENT JOB

Russell Uhler, chairman of the county Democratic central committee, and member of the state Democratic central committee, has not resigned as county purchasing agent. The rumor in courthouse circles that he would take this step as a consequence of the resolutions of the board, adopted while he was attending the state committee meeting at Sacramento, was refuted by Uhler yesterday, after his return, and after meeting some of the members of the board. He said, however, that his course of action would depend very largely upon the feeling of the board.

"I was absent Tuesday at the county central committee meeting," said Uhler, "I was required by law to be present at the meeting. There I was sent to the state meeting, where I was also required by law to attend, representing the county. At the time I left for these meetings, there was no resolution on the supervisors' books."

Uhler said he felt the resolution was not intended to be retroactive, or to apply to the day on which it was adopted. He will ascertain the views of the board and will abide by their wishes.

"I know I have had to be absent a great deal," he said. But someone has had to look after the Democratic committee work. I think Republicans and Democrats alike will say I have conducted the party work in all fairness. But when it comes to the resolution about the office hours, well, you know that Governor Johnson said 'a man must eat.'"

Hebbert C. Harvey, county expert, who also attended the committee meetings, apparently is awaiting the lead of Uhler. It was pointed out by one of the officials yesterday that his position is one requiring activities in various offices, and that the question of office hours is not of prime importance. It was said, however, that he has been doing some outside accounting, but whether in amount sufficient to impair his efficiency as a county official, no one would venture an opinion.

SAYS DEMOCRATS ARE FULL OF LIFE

The Democratic state central committee, understanding its duty to be that of nominating someone to run on the ticket for governor, yet uncertain what the Supreme Court will do, took time by the forelock and named Francis J. Heney as their choice to be ready for eventualities, according to Russell Uhler, who returned from the San Francisco conference yesterday.

"It was a very lively body that we found in San Francisco," said Uhler, "very lively for a party our opponent says is dead. One of the things that contributed to the liveliness was the action Van Wyck, who held forty proxies, generally believed to support himself, and to serve as a starter for an independent race. The votes were counted in in spite of him. The ruling out of Rolph delegates also caused interesting manifestations of a vivid spark in the body politic."

Uhler is content to await the action of the courts on the nomination. He would not discuss the possibility of his own entry into the gubernatorial finals.

BIG DEMONSTRATION TO OPEN GREAT LOAN DRIVE

Fresno's Thousands to Pledge Support to Boys Over There

Pageant Will Celebrate Crossing of Dough Boys Into Germany

Fresno's pledge to stand behind the American doughboys who crushed the line at St. Mihiel and set their heavy, hob-nailed foot-prints on German soil under the great guns of Metz is to be made publicity in Courthouse Park and in the Municipal Auditorium on the night of September 27—it is to be made by tens of thousands of red-blooded, 100 per cent Americans and other thousands representing the ten great nations allied with us in the war as part of the most imposing and significant patriotic demonstration ever held in the San Joaquin valley.

And this great outpouring of the people and of the spirit of the people will mark the opening of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive.

"Pay Their Way"—our boys have crossed into Germany, they have begun the long awaited, bitterly fought yet triumphant march to Berlin and Fresno, on the night before the day set for the great opening of the big Liberty Loan drive, will pledge itself to help "Pay Their Way" to the seat of the falling Empire of Wilhelm with $6,000,000.

"Carry On" is the cry that stirred France in those days when doubt and fear of failure lurked in the footsteps of the slowly retreating "Hun Devils" after the great Hun drive was begun on March 21. And they carried on. They hold on. Today "Carry On" is one of the national slogans of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. Our boys over there—the First American Army—are carrying on, carrying on so fast that in 24 hours they wiped out the St. Mihiel salient and marched right on—into Germany.

At last they are on their way to Berlin. The march has been begun.

And Fresno—every man, woman and child in Fresno—will at once celebrate on the opening night of the Fourth Liberty loan the first great victory of Pershing's men and pledge themselves to stand behind the doughboys over there until Old Glory has been borne to the very gates of the Imperial Palace of the Head Hun.

The plan to make the opening day of the Fourth Liberty Loan a celebration of the first sweeping American victory in France and at the same time a day on which every man, woman and child in Fresno will be called upon to make a solemn pledge to help with $6,000,000 to "pay the way of Pershing's doughboys to Berlin was outlined yesterday to General Chairman W. O. Miles of the Liberty Loan committee and Campaign Manager Fred B. Fox by Director-of-Publicity David Swing Ricker. And the plan at once was adopted. Chairman Miles named Mr. Ricker as chairman of the parade committee and placed the entire celebration in his hands.

It is the plan of Chairman Ricker to make the great celebration not only surpass the big demonstration which marked the opening of the Third Liberty Loan last year, but staged on such a scale that it will attract attention all over the state and again let California know that "Fresno Never Fails."

At the suggestion of General Chairman Miles two great meetings will be held on the opening night this year—one in the Auditorium and a second big meeting in Courthouse Park. Last spring the number who took part in the Third Liberty parade was so great that the Auditorium was overflowed and an impromptu meeting was held in the park. This year preparations will be made to take care of the great overflow and their will be bands and speakers at both places.

All the committees to take charge of the different parade features together with the grand marshal will be announced by Chairman Ricker tomorrow.

Every organization in the city, every lodge and civic body, every club and every labor union will be asked to march 100 per cent strong. Furthermore every man, woman and child in Fresno who is a native of the countries allied with America in the great war will be asked to march in a body behind Old Glory as their pledge to stand behind the boys "over there" until peace is won by victory.

With the organization of the various committees a meeting will be held early this week at which all the plans for the big celebration will be outlined in detail.

FIFTEEN FROM VALLEY DISTRICTS SEEK SEATS IN LEGISLATURE; TWO WOMEN

Adair county, Iowa, where all of his boyhood days were spent. He was educated there and taught in the public schools for a number of years. He was also deputy county school superintendent for several years. He was orderly sergeant of the State National Guards.

In the Spring of 1887 he moved with his family to Yuma, Colorado. He was married at Yuma to Miss Etta M. Wharton, September 19, 1888. To this union were born four children, two daughters, Salma, now Mrs. Earnest Crailshill of Corcoran, and Dorothy, who is still at home with her parents. His two sons, Edward and Harry both enlisted in the United States army in May 1917. Harry was rejected because of physical disability. Edward was accepted and is now at Camp Wadsworth, Spartenburg, South Carolina.

In June, 1909, Mr. Cochrane came to Corcoran where he now resides. In 1910 he was elected member of the board of county supervisors and served one term. He was member of the board of trustees of the city of Corcoran from the time said city was incorporated in 1914 until October, 1917, when he resigned to move on to his ranch north of town.

J. W. MARTIN

J. W. Martin, Democratic candidate for the Assembly from the Tulare county district, has been a resident of central California for the past score of years.

He was formerly in the practice of law, retiring from this activity to take charge of extensive ranch interests in the Porterville district. He is a native of California, practically all of his later active life having been spent in Tulare county. He served for a number of years as Supervisor from the Fifth district, which includes the Woodville and Poplar districts.

The Democratic candidate for the assembly from the 61st or Fresno city district is Attorney S. L. Strother. He was born in Marshall, Missouri, in 1867, and was educated in the public schools of his native place. Afterwards he attended Central College, Fayette, Missouri, and Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tennessee. Mr. Strother was admitted to practice law in Missouri in 1889, and came to Fresno in the same year, and located here in the practice of his profession. He has made his home in Fresno for many years. For some years he was associated with his father the late Judge J. Strother.

Mr. Strother received the nomination as the dry candidate of the Democratic party against F. C. Huebner and L. M. McDonald. He has taken an active part in every dry campaign in the city of Fresno.

C. W. CLEARY.

The nomination for assemblyman in the next in the affairs of his city.

Fifty-fifth district, composed of Tulare county, was born in Calaveras county, December 1, 1881, and came with his parents to Coalinga, Fresno county, in 1887. He was married in 1905 to Elsie Haugland, of Santa Cruz, and in 1909 moved to Lindsay, Tulare county, where he has since resided. He was been identified with every moral and community work at Lindsay.

Mr. Cleary came out for the Republican nomination for assembly at the request of representatives of the California ratification committee and won the nomination after a hard fight, the situation having been complicated by the entrance of another dry candidate.

Politically Cleary was a charter member of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League and has always been a staunch supporter of the Johnson-policies.

OSCAR L. ODALE.

Oscar L. Odale, a Kings county farmer, of near Lemoore, secures the Democratic nomination for assembly from the Fifty-fourth district, composed of Kings county in its entirety, through a write-in campaign waged by his friends, who insisted, against his refusal, on his becoming the party's candidate.

Odale has been an active worker for the elimination of the liquor traffic. He is thoroughly well acquainted with the needs of his district along irrigation and agricultural development. He asserts that if elected he will vote to ratify the federal constitutional prohibition amendment.

GUY WINDREM.

The candidate for the assembly for the Forty-ninth district, composed of Madera and Merced counties, was born on a homestead in Nebraska in 1867, and came to Madera in 1892. In 1894 he took a position with the largest retail store in San Francisco, becoming manager in 1901. In 1904 he resigned on account of ill health and returned Madera, where he purchased a piece of land which he has brought to a high state of cultivation. Nine years ago he took a position as traveling salesman for a California shoe factory, which position he still holds. He has continued to live on his ranch, as farming is his hobby. He has been an enthusiastic progressive Democrat and a staunch supporter of President Wilson.

B. W. McKEEN.

The editor of the Kingsburg Recorder is the Republican candidate for assemblyman from the Fiftieth district, which comprise the west side of the county. He was born in Cambria county, Pennsylvania, November 10, 1863. When 6 years of age he moved with his parents to Waterloo, Iowa. He graduated from the local schools and from the Iowa State Normal school, and taught school many years in that state and in Nebraska. SEEK AID FOR BARLEY GROWERS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 14—An appeal for government assistance to prevent a "serious financial loss to barley growers of California due to a stagnant market" will be made by a committee which will leave Monday for Washington, D. C., Jesse Poundstone, a barley grower of Colusa, Cal., announced here today. The committee will confer with the grain department of the United States food administration and urge the shipment of barley overseas with wheat, he said. At present only wheat is being shipped, according to Poundstone.

"Approximately 160,000 tons of barley, valued at $25,000,000, stored in warehouses in the state must be moved to make space for the rice crop, soon to be harvested," Poundstone said. "Sale of barley to breweries has been prohibited, the market is stagnant and bankers are beginning to call their crop loans in preparation for the Fourth Liberty loan.

"This has created a conditon which is threatening growers with a serious loss unless some outlet is found for the crop."

The committee which will go to Washington is composed of Dr. E. L. Dow of Knights Landing; W. P. Dwyer of Sacramento, and A. J. Ames of San Francisco.

Artistic Shoes

For the making of Ladies' attractive Shoes this Fall, artistic designing is to some extent taking the place of certain materials which are either scarce or not procurable at all. Good workmanship is another factor which more than ever counts in shoes at their present necessarily high prices. It therefore is increasingly important to select your shoe store with great care and buy from firms whose facilities enable them to get from their manufacturers the best that is to be had. We do not sell better shoes, because it is impossible to obtain better shoes.

SAY U. S. DRIVE MASTER STROKE

French Ridicule German Claim of Voluntary Withdrawal

PARIS, Sept. 14—The American army's maiden effort as an independent force in the world war is regarded by the French press and public as nothing less than a master stroke. The further details that have come through showing the extent of the ground gained and the great number of prisoners taken in two days on a relatively small front have more than borne out the early expectations.

"The American army has gained a great victory at high speed," says Colonel De Thomasson, the military critic, who pays tribute to the American staff and troops for their having in such a brief time attained the high standard of efficiency they have displayed.

To say that tonight's American official report revealed an achievement far in excess of what had been expected is no disparagement of the American army, but the moral effect in France seems in consequence of this to measure well up with the military results attained.

The American soldiers now in Paris are being feasted by the people of the city, who stop the men on the streets and grip their hands in congratulations over the victory.

In general, the military commentators prefer to reserve judgment of the full effects of the offensive until more ample details are available.

Henri Bidou points out that the St. Mihiel was of great importance as a base for an enemy drive.

"If the Germans abandoned such a position, he argues, it is a sign that the general military situation forced them to take the step after their withdrawal from the Somme line and then from that of the Lys. He adds that whether or not the withdrawal was voluntary, the operation cost the Germans dearly.

The editorial writers are generous in their praise of the American effort. "This operation," says the Echo De Paris, "does honor to the enterprising spirit of the American leaders and the incomparable ardor of their troops."

The Petit Parisien says:

"It is the first time the American army alone has launched an offensive on a great scale, but it will not be the last. From the showing it has made the Germans have been able to see that they have to reckon with ardent, enthusiastic and audacious troops."

Little Memphy (endeavoring to entertain elated Kate's beau)—"When sister Kate marries you will she become a widow?" Kate's Beau—"A widow? Ye gods! What put such nonsense into your little head?" Little Memphy—"Hearing mother tell sister that you are a dead one!"—Judge.

FIND EMPLACEMENT FOR 76-MILE GUN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—French soldiers have located the emplacement of the last big cannon used by the Germans in the bombardment of Paris, an official dispatch from Paris today says.

"In the Coeuvres wood, in the neighborhood of Beaumont and Cathuy, the place from which the 'Big Bertha' fired up to the time the Paris region has been found. The spot is just as airplane photographs have shown it to be. The gun itself had, of course, been removed. The position is in two different parts, one for the real gun and one for a sham. Both are exactly alike. The emplacement consists of a pit divided in three parts, twelve meters long and two meters wide over all. The firing gun does not seem to have been hit by our planes, but the sham one bears marks of their fire."

LLOYD-GEORGE WIRES PERSHING

LONDON, Sept. 14—(By the Associated Press.)—Premier Lloyd-George sent the following message from Manchester to General Pershing at the American front:

"I desire to offer to you and your brave armies heartiest congratulations on your great victory.

"The enemy has made many mistakes in this war, but none greater than when he underrated the valor, determination and intrepid spirit of the brave soldiers from the great democracy of the United States. Now that he has tested the mettle of the American armies, the enemy knows what is in store for him.

"The news came to me on my sick bed; it was better and infinitely more palatable than any physic."

PROGRESS MADE ON REVENUE BILL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—General debate in the House on the war revenue bill ended today and the way was cleared for taking the measure up Monday, section by section, for debate on amendments under the five-minute rule. Passage of the bill by Friday was predicted by Democratic Leader Kitchin.

Hearings by the Senate finance committee will continue next week, but they are expected to be brought to a close as soon as the bill is disposed of by the House.

In the discussion in the House today representatives praised the bill as a whole, although some sections were criticised.

The first part of the campaign will end September 27 at Oakland. The second will begin October 7 and end October 12. The military for the speakers in this section of the campaign will be announced soon.

The speakers will emphasize the necessity of sending 15,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs to the Allies and the United States armies prior to next June. Further voluntary sacrifices in the use of foodstuffs will be called for.

FLYERS CAPTURE GERMAN BATTERY

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES ON BRITISH FRONT, August 25—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The capture of a German battery by two British airplanes was one of the unique incidents of the fighting in this area.

The two airplanes, fighting scouts, sent out to harry the German infantry in the course of an important "local action" undertaken by the British and American troops, had dispersed a battalion of German infantry when they sighted, a quarter mile behind the German line, a suspicious group of objects under some trees. Near the group of objects were forty or fifty horses which were evidently being harnessed to something. The secret was soon out. The Germans were trying to remove a battery of field guns before the British and American infantry appeared on the scene.

The airmen dived down until they were less than 100 feet from the ground. Then they opened fire, aiming at the guns and the demoralized gunners, but seeking chiefly to frighten the horses. The horses required little encouragement, for their drivers deserted them in search of cover and soon the animals were galloping off.

For nearly a mile, the airmen followed them, then the airplanes were turned once more toward the battery. It was surprisingly easy to drive off the remaining men of the battery, for only a short distance away across the ridge the British and American vanguards were advancing. The two scouts landed in the field nearby, then walked up to the guns and in a few minutes calmly handed them over to the British commanders.

KING CABLES TO PRESIDENT

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—King George has sent a message of congratulation to President Wilson on the victory won by General Pershing in the St. Mihiel salient.

KEEP HUN ARMY TOO BUSY TO REST, FOCH PLAN

individual soldier himself. It is hot stuff."

Lacking official news of further advances by General Pershing's troops within the salient, the opinion that this movement has already reached the immediate limits it was planned to attain, gained strength among military officers.

With the French now taking up the fight in the center of the great line which comprises the western front from Arras to Verdun (the brief official announcement today said they attacked on the Oise-Aisette sector south of the Aisne) it is considered entirely probable that the next move of the American army is dependent upon the results of this offensive. An advance of any importance by the French will threaten the stability of the famous Chemin-Des-Dames ridge, and to a less extent, possibly, will affect the St. Gobain massif upon which the new defenses of the Germans seem to be based. Some observers expressed the belief that today's attack might have the primary object of cutting behind St. Gobain forest.

Metz Next Objective?

Collapse of the German position at La Fere and Laon would mean a considerable retirement and there is every reason to expect, officers say, that Marshal Foch would take quick advantage of the resultant confusion to press and encircling campaign against Metz itself, employing both General Pershing's army and the French forces at Verdun in development of the movement. In that event, a double American thrust is anticipated, one in cooperation with the French east of Verdun, and the other aimed to pass Metz on the opposite flank.

"As Good As a Steinway"

Today the subject of pianos can hardly be discussed without using the word "Steinway." The word is practically "legal tender," having passed into the current coin of language. You will hear people say, "This piano has the Steinway touch," or "The tone is like a Steinway," or, "This instrument is almost as good as a Steinway." In other words, the STEINWAY has been accepted universally as the STANDARD of Piano excellence.

(Did your ever hear anybody say, "This piano is better than a Steinway"?)

CLOSE INSTITUTE FOR SPEAKERS

Final Instructions Are Given Y. W. Lecturers of Publicity Campaign

The closing of the two days' Speakers' Institute given under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Y. W. C. A. brought with it results that had been unexpected, but entirely desirable, according to Miss Maude Wolff, general secretary of the local association, she stated last night.

Mrs. L. R. Wilson was presiding officer of the institute.

The morning session yesterday began with devotions by Miss Wolff at 10:30 on the mezzanine floor of the Hotel Fresno.

Miss Martha Chickering, immigration worker of the Pacific Coast field, with present headquarters at Fresno, continued her talk on "Women in the World War." She stated that in two munitions plants in Bridgeport there are 45,000 women workers, and one railroad has put in 9,000 women in one year. These women are doing work that has never been undertaken by women before; they have taken the place of switchmen, towermen, signalmen, etc. She spoke to some extent of the reconstruction work being carried on.

After Miss Chickering's address, round table was conducted by Mrs. Annie Little Barry, followed by adjournment at 12:30 and luncheon at the Royal Cafeteria.

At 2 o'clock Miss Charlotte Davis gave many interesting outlines for speech material for the coming speaker, with much stress laid upon the value of the personal touch or incident.

The publicity of the work was described by Mrs. Barry, and envelopes with several pamphlets on the development of the speech and on material for the speech were distributed among the women present.

Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan, who is touring the country on the speaking platform for the bureau of public information, gave many illustrations of the stress under which the British women are working continually.

Miss Davis' challenge to workers concluded the session.

The following women registered yesterday from out of town: Mrs. Roy Giffen, Fowler; Mrs. Geraldine Fetra Olmstead, Los Angeles; Mrs. W. D. Lyon, Lindsay; Mrs. E. J. Atkisson, Sanger; Mrs. Hope Reyburn Johnson, Hardwick.

The following Fresno women registered: Mrs. M. F. McCormick, Mrs. W. A. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Alsip, Mrs. W. P. Miller, Mrs. Ethel L. Smith, Mrs. Beulah Lorenz, Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. W. A. Edgerly.

DOCUMENTS REVEAL GERMAN CONTROL OF RUSSIA UNDER BOLSHEVIKI RULE

circulars (see appendix later) of which only two originals are possessed, but all of which fit perfectly into the whole pattern of German intrigue and German guilt.

The first document is a photograph of a report made to the Bolshevik leaders by two of their assistants informing them that in accordance with their instructions there had been removed from the archives of the Russian ministry of justice the order of the German Imperial bank "allowing money to Comrades Lenin, Trotzky and others . . for the propaganda of peace in Russia," and at the same time "all the books" of a bank in Stockholm had been "audited" to conceal the payment of money to Lenin, Trotzky and their associates by order of the German Imperial bank.

Steps at Concealment

This report is indorsed by Lenin with his initials for deposit in "the secret department" of the Bolshevik files, and the authenticity of the report is supported by document No. 2, which is the original of a report sent by a German general staff representative to the Bolshevik leaders warning them that he has just arrested an agent who had in his possession the original order of the German Imperial bank referred to in document No. 1, and pointing out that evidently "at the proper time steps were not taken to destroy the above mentioned documents."

Preparing For War

Document No. 3 is the original protocol signed by several Bolshevik leaders and dated November 2, 1917, showing that "on instructions of the representatives of the German general staff in Petrograd" and "with the consent of the council of people's Commissars," of which Trotzky and Lenin were the heads, two incriminating German circulars had also been "taken from the department of secret service of the Petrograd district" and given to the secret service department of the German general staff in Petrograd. On the bottom of the protocol, the German adjutant acknowledges receipt of the two incriminating circulars with his cipher signature. And to complete the evidence the circulars are themselves penciled with the cipher signature of the head of the German secret bureau.

These two circulars apparently had been obtained by some Russian agent in Germany and transmitted to Russia. The German general staff evidently wished to get them back in order to destroy them. By the order of the German general staff and with the "consent" of Lenin and Trotzky they are turned over to the Germans to be destroyed. Why? Because they are conclusive proof that on June 9, 1914, the German government was preparing for war several weeks before the assassination of the Austrian Archduke, which was made the pretext for war.

Steps at Mobilization

One circular is an order from the German general staff, dated June 9, 1914, informing "all industrial concerns" in Germany to open the sealed envelopes containing their "industrial mobilization plans and registration forms" so that they might be prepared for the war for which the excuse had not yet been found. "The second circular is an order from the German general staff of the high sea fleet, dated November 28, 1914, calling for the mobilization of all destructive agents and observers in the United States and Canada for the purpose of preventing the sailing of ships from American ports to Russia, France and England. The order calls for explosions, strikes, "delays, embroilments and difficulties," and it recommends the employment of anarchists and escaped criminals" for the purpose. It is these damning proofs of a German conspiracy against the nations of Europe in June, 1914, and against the United States in November, 1914—it is shown that Lenin and Trotzky surrendered to the German secret service in Petrograd on order of "the representatives of the German general staff in Petrograd" and they surrender them in conformity with a working agreement between the Bolshevik leaders and the German general staff, of which agreement a photograph is included in the series of documents as document No. 5.

Proof of Cooperation

It is dated October, 1917. It is from a division of the German general staff. It is addressed to the Council of the Peoples' Commissars, of which Lenin and Trotzky were the heads. It begins: "In accordance with the agreement which took place in Kronstadt, in July of the present year, between officials of our general staff and leaders of the Russian Revolutionary Army and Democracy, Messrs. Lenin and Trotzky Rasolnikov and Dybenko, the Russian division of our general staff operating in Finland is ordering to Petrograd officers for the disposal of the information department of the staff." Among the officers named are Maj. Luberts, whose cipher signature is given as it appears on the two surrendered German circulars mentioned above (Document No. 3) and Lieut. Hartwig, whose cipher signature is given as it appears on the receipt for the two circulars. And an indorsement on this letter from the German general staff records that the German officers asigned to Petrograd had appeared "before the Military Revolutionary Committee" and had "agreed on conditions with regard to their mutual activities."

Garmans Control Election

What their "mutual activities" were to be is sufficiently indicated by document No. 7, which is a photograph of a letter signed in cipher by this Maj. Lubert and his adjutant, Lieut. Hartwig. They notify the Bolshevik leaders of January 12, 1918, that "by order of the German general staff" the German intelligence section "has informed us of the names and the characteristics of the main candidates for reelection to the Ruslan Bolshevik Central Executive Committee," and "the general staff orders us to insist on the election of the following people." They add a list of Russian leaders satisfactory to the German general staff. The list is headed by Trotzky and Lenin. They were elected and the rest of the present Bolshevik executives were chosen from the same German list.

Money Paid Over

Document No. 23 gives evidence of the quid pro quo. It is a photograph of a letter from the president of the German Imperial Bank to the Bolshevik commissar of foreign affairs. It is marked "very secret" and dated January 8, 1918. It says: "Information has today been received by me from Stockholm that 50,000,000 rubles of gold have been transferred to be put at the disposal of the people's commissars, which is the title of the Bolshevik leaders. This credit, the letter continues, "has been supplied to the Russian government in order to cover the cost of the keep of the Red Guards the Bolshevik revolutionary troops and agitators in the country. The Imperial government considers it appropriate to to remind the soviet of people's commissars of the necessity of increasing propaganda in the country as the antagonistic attitude of the south of Russia and Siberia to the existing (Russian) government is troubling the German government." Four days later the same president of the German Imperial bank sent another 5,000,000 rubles to the same address to provide for the sending of a Russian revolutionary leader to Vladivostok to get possession of the "Japanese and American war materials" at that port and if necessary to destroy them. A photograph of his letter is given as document No. 9.

There were earlier payments, but probably none later than these. None were necessary. By this time the loot of an empire lay open to the Bolsheviks and the Germans.

To Control Russian Industry

Most significant of all are two photographs of further communications from the German Imperial bank given as documents Nos. 10 and 11. One is a letter addressed to the chairman of the Council of People's Commissars and the other is the "Resolution of Conference of Representatives of the German commercial banks", received by the chairman of the Bolshevik in the Central Executive Committee and indorsed by his secretary. Together they gave a complete synopsis of the terms on which Germany intends to have control of all Russian industry. For five years from the signing of peace, English, French and American capital in Russia are to be "banished" and "not be allowed in the following industries; coal, metal, fabric machine building, oil, chemical and pharmaceutical." These industries are to be developed under the control of a "Supreme Advisory organ consisting of ten Russian specialists, ten from German industrial organization and the German and Austrian bank." Germany and Austria are to enjoy the unlimited privilege of sending mechanics and qualified workmen into Russia. "All other foreign mechanics and workmen are not to be allowed to enter at all" for five years after the conclusion of peace between Russia and Germany. "Private banks in Russia arise only with the consent" of the union of German and Austrian banks and so forth.

And this conspiracy between German imperial capitalism and the pretended Russian Reds is indorsed by a Bolshevik leader, with the recommendation that it should be "taken under advisement" and "the ground prepared in the soviet of the workmen's and soldier's deputies in case the Council of People's commissars will not accede to these requests."

To Seize Allied Supplies

Various details of the conspiracy between the Bolshevikli leaders and the German general staff are exposed in Documents 16 to 29. These are photographs of letters which passed between the Bolshevik. Document No. 21 shows that on November 1, 1917, when Russia was still regarded as an ally of Great Britain, France and America, the German general staff was having "The honor to request" the Bolshevik leaders to inform it "at the earliest possible moment concerning "the quantity and storage place of the supplies that have been received from America, England and France, and what units are keeping guard over the store."

Document 18 shows the German general staff requiring the Bolsheviki leaders to send "Agitators to the camps of the Russian prisoners of war in Germany" in order that they might procure spies to work among the English and French troops and to further "peace propaganda." And this is proposed by the German general staff as being "according to the negotiations between the Russian and German peace delegations at Brest-Litovisk."

Send Agents to America

In document 22 the Bolshevik leaders and the Germans are arranging to send "agents," agitators and agent destructors" out of Vladivostok "to posts of the United States, Japan, and British colonies in eastern Asia."

In document 16, Trotzky is providing fraudulent passports for German officers who are going to England, France and America, as spies and enemy agents. And Document 17 shows Trotzky indorsing a similar proposal "to be urgently executed i. T."

Three German submarines are to be sent to the Pacific on the trans Siberian railway by orders of the German High Command in document No. 23. Lists of German and Russian spies watching the British, French and American embassies in Petrograd are given in document No. 25, and finally in document No. 15 the Bolshevik leaders are warned that information concerning "the connection of the German government with the Bolshevik workers" has leaked out and that Russian troops are hearing of it.

Plans for Assassination

Letters are given to show how the Bolshevik leaders and the German officers arranged for the assassination of Russian Nationalist leaders (Documents 35, 39, and 52), for the destruction of the Polish Legionaries in the Russian army (Documents 40 to 42) for the disorganization of the Rumanian army and the deposing of the Rumanian king (Document 37), for the substitution of officers satisfactory to Germany in command of Russian troops instead of patriotic Russian generals (Documents 31 and 32), for the suppression of patriotic agitation among the Russian soldiers (Documents 13 and 14), for attack upon the Italian ambassador in Petrograd and the confiscation of his papers (Documents 26 and 27) and for the employment of German soldiers in Russian uniforms against the Russian National armies in the south (Document35).

Several of the letters are indorsed by Trotzky. Even standing alone they are complete proof that the Bolshevik leaders were ruling as German agents in Russia and obeying German orders to act against all Germany's enemies and even against Russia itself.

Suppressed Socialism

Moreover, these Bolshevik leaders acted as German agents by suppressing their own socialist revolution in the Russian provinces where their doctrines interfered with German plans of annexation. Document 46 is the original letter from the Petrograd department of the General German staff addressed to the Bolshevik commisiar of Foreign affairs. It reads; "According to the instructions of the representatives of our general staff, I have the honor once more to insist that you recall from Estland, Litva, and Courland all agitators of the Central Executive committee of the Soviet of Workmen and Soldiers deputies." And in document 47 the General Staff orders the Bolshevik to cease the agitation in Estland which had "finally led to the German landlords being declared outlawed", and to "take immediate steps for the restoring the rights of the above mentioned German landlords."

Another group of letters (Nos. 33 to 36) shows how the Germans cheated the Bolshevik leaders in their dealings with the Ukraine and made a separate German peace with the anti-Bolshevik leaders in that Russian province. And another group shows the Germans assisting both sides of the civil war in Finland (Documents 38, 43, and 53).

The documents as they follow are given in the report form in which they were transmitted by Mr. Sisson to Mr. Creel, chairman of the committee, with some later data added and carefully indicated. For instance, Mr. Sisson did not learn for several weeks after he had left Russia that the German order (which he possessed) naming the Russian who was to "defend" Petrograd had been obeyed.

Edgar Sisson's Report

Instalment One—Introduction and Documents 1 to 7.

Three groups of documents are subjected to internal analysis in the material that follows. One group consists of originals, one group consists of photographs of documents believed still to be in the file rooms of the Russian Bolsheviki, and the third (the appendix to the first instalment) of typewritten circulars that have not been traced to their originals except in the case of two of the numbers. The chief importance of the third group is that its appearance inspired the efforts that led to the uncovering of the other groups, and they fit into the fabric of the whole.

The first set of these appendix circulars came into my hands on February 2, in Petrograd. An additional set appeared the following day at an office where I frequently called. A third appeared in another quarter a day afterwards. One set was in Russian and two in English. On February 5 I held all three sets. A possible explanation for their appearance at this time and their intent is given by the appendix.

By themselves they were plausible but not substantiated, having first performed the obvious duty of analyzing them for surface values and transmitting them and the analysis to Washington, I turned, therefore, to the task of further investigations.

It is not yet possible to name those who helped, but in two weeks' time the judgment of facts became apparent.

The material is presented in its report form, with the addition of some later data. For instance, I was not able to learn until several weeks after I left Russia that the German order (which I possessed) naming the Russian who was to "defend" Petrograd had been obeyed.

The texts of the documents disclose both the methods and the effects of the German conspiracy not alone against Russia, but all the world. With each document is the indication of whether it is an original or photograph. With each document is an interpretative note.

Very Secret.—People's Commissary for Foreign Affairs.

Petrograd, November 16, 1917.

To the Chairman of the Council of People's Commissiars:

In accordance with the resolution passed by the conference of the People's Commissars, comrades Lenine, Trotsky, Podvoisky, Dybenko and Volodarsky, the following has been executed by us:

1. In the archives of the Ministry of Justice from the dossier re "Treason" of Comrades Lenine, Zinovieff, Koslovsky, Kollontan and others, has been removed the order of the German Imperial Bank, No. 7433, of the second of March, 1917, for allowing money to Comrades Lenine, Zinovsky, Kameneff, Trotsky, Sumenson, Koslovsky and others for the propaganda of peace in Russia.

2. There has been audited all the books of the Nia Bank at Stockholm containing the accounts of Comrades Lenine, Trotsky, Zinovieff and others, which were opened by the order of the German Imperial Bank No. 2751. There books have been delivered to Comrade Muller, who was sent from Berlin.

Authorized by the Commissar for Foreign Affairs, F. Zalkond, E. Polivanoff.

Note.—The Russian Council of People's Commissars was dominated by the president, Vladimir Ulianov (Lenine), the then foreign minister; Leon Trotsky, now minister of war, and the ambassador to Germany, J. Joffe.

The marginal indorsement in writing is "To the Secret Department, V. L." This is the fashion in which Lenine is accustomed to initial himself. The English equivalent would be V. N., for Vladimir Ulianov. So, if there existed no further record of German Imperial Bank order No. 7433, here would be the proof of its contents, and here is the link connecting Lenine directly with his action and his guilt. The content matter of the circular exists, however, and herewith follows:

Order of the second of March, 1917, of the Imperial Bank for the representatives of all German banks in Sweden.

Notice is hereby given that requisition propaganda in Russia will be received through Finland. These requisitions will emanate from the following: Lenine, Zinovieff, Kamenoff, Trotsky, Sumenson, Koslovsky, Kollontai, Sivers and Merkalin. Accounts for whom have been opened in accordance with our order No. 2754 in the agencies of private German businesses in Sweden, Norway and Switzerland. All these requests should bear one of the two following signatures: Ipshan or Milkenberg. With either of these signatures the request of the above mentioned persons should be complied with without delay.

7433, Imperial Bank.

I have not a copy of this circular nor a photograph of it, but Document No. 2, next in order, proves its authenticity at once curiously and absolutely. Particular interest attaches to this circular because of Bolshevik public denial of its existence. It was one of several German circulars published in Paris in the Petit Parisienne last winter. The Petrograd Bolshevik papers proclaimed it a falsehood. Zalkind, whose signature appears not only on here but on the protocol, was an assistant foreign minister. He was sent in February on a mission outside of Russia. He was in Christiania in April when I was there.

Have photograph of the letter.

Document No. 2.

No. 6451, secret.

(G. G. S., Nachrichten Bureau, Section R.)

February 12.

The secret service department has the honor to inform you that there were found on the arrested Captain Konshin two German documents with notations and stamps of the Petersburg secret police (Okrana) which show themselves to be the original of the Imperial Bank, No. 7433, March 2, 1917, concerning the opening of accounts for Messers. Lenin, Sumenson, Koslovsky, Trotsky and other active workers on the peace propaganda, by order No. 2754 of the Imperial bank.

For the head of the department:

R. Bauer, Adjt. Bukhalm.

Note.—Observe the thoughtfulness with which Bauer, a careful man, set down exactly what was in the document, thereby permitting the contents to rise again from the ashes to which perhaps he committed the damaging papers. He admits that the documents found were truthful originals. The world will thank him and Germany will not.

I have the original letter. It bears marginal indorsements "referred to the commission for fighting counter revolution. Demanded documents M. Skripnik, and an illegible comment by M. Gorbenoy, Lanigues, other government secretary. The letter is directed to Lenin. Did Skripnik get the documents? I do not know.

The letter is remarkable otherwise, for the arrested Captain Konshin mentioned is a German officer, Lieut. Otto, who appears elsewhere as an agent in the German double crossing intrigue in the Ukraine. What was behind the mystery of his arrest? What his fate? Document No. 3.

(V. K. D. pr. 332-2 Inclosures.)

PROTOCOL.

This protocl, written by us on the 2nd of November, 1917, in duplicate, with the comment of the Council of People's Commissars, is taken from the department of secret service of the Petrograd district and the former department of police (Okrana), on instruction of the representatives of the German general staff in Petrograd:

1—Circular of the German general staff

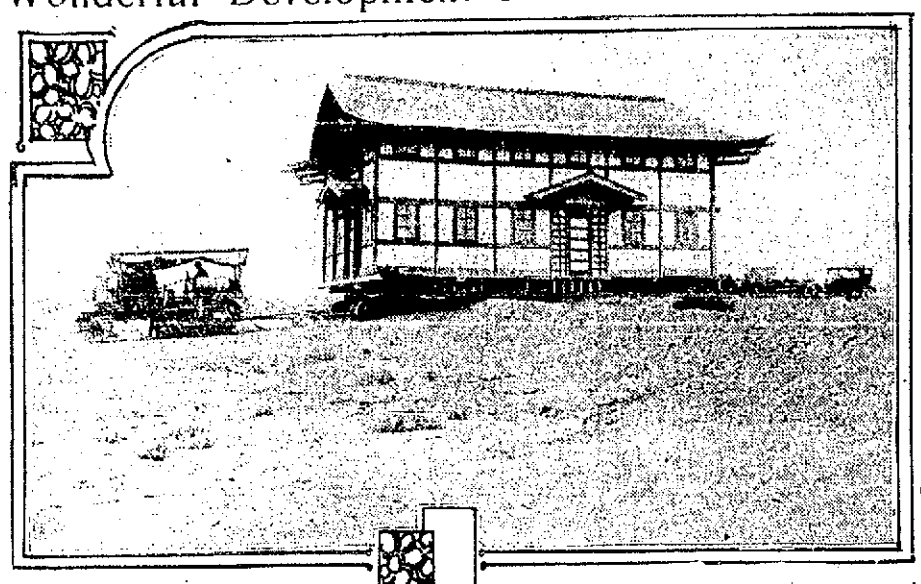
FRESNO'S GREAT FIG GARDENS

Wonderful Development Is Made in One Year



Upper—Each new 1000-acre unit of young fig trees to be planted requires a complete camp or headquarters. The above photograph shows the moving of a Japanese house a distance of five miles from one headquarters to another headquarters. After the trees are planted and one year old it takes less housing facilities to care for them thereafter. Hence, these main camps are moved from one part of this 6000-acre fig garden to another, as new units are put out from year to year.

A 90-horsepower traction engine is pulling this Japanese cook house, which accommodates 40 or 50 Japanese.

Lower—A J. C. Forkner Fig Garden three years old. These figs produced about 300 pounds of figs to the acre this year. They were lightly caprified. At 15c per pound they brought $45.00 to the acre.

By MART V. DONALDSON

A trip to the former pasture lands of the immediate northwest section, skirting the south shores of the San Joaquin river, places in evidence the J. C. Forkner Fig Gardens, where "hog-wallow" stretches have been converted into alluring fig gardens, where homes have been builded, where schools have been made operative because of the children of these homes who call for that to which state policy entitles them, where the despised "hard-pan" has proven the one thing of value in this fig tree forestation, where 4300 acres of figs are now growing, and where preparation for 1600 acres to plant the coming season is now in process; where but the tickling of the soil gives the assurance of competence throughout the years of more than one lifetime—here is in realization something of all that through the last three years has been in process of building.

For this Forkner Fig Garden has become a reality,—not alone in the forestation suggested but in the financial return to which men of constructive vision and industry are entitled and are assured.

A Fresno Wonder-Land

Yesterday, it was mine to be driven over these fig gardens, where in former times I witnessed the "shooting" of the hole through the "hard-pan" for the placing of the tender roots of the baby fig tree beneath.

Yesterday, I stood beside the fig tree of that "shooting" and ate of luscious abundance of the fruitage of this valley forest, the trees being laden in prodigality.

This three-year-old fig garden has been lightly caprified for the purpose of making a demonstration. Each tree produced about six pounds of fruit which at 15 cents per pound, with 45 to the acre, runs into a return of about $42 per acre. Pretty good for these three-year-olds, destined to produce for thousands of years.

This little orchard, or rather this great orchard of "little fellows," just doing their darndest in the matter of return for the little care they require, was to me a sight that cannot but leave its impress—that which should impress the most indifferent, a sight that spells prosperity for this section for ages to come.

Promise of the Years

For, it is not of record that the fig trees of Palestine, a country in its physical aspects quite identical with California, that gave shade and refreshment to the Son of Man, 3000 years ago, are still yielding the commercial product that makes for the larger purse of the Britisher now in possession of the land so long held by the Turkish Mohammedan forces? ...

Yes, and it is also of record that all of the comercial figs of the United States are grown in California, and that 85 per cent of this "all" are grown in Fresno county.

Ride of Enlightenment

In this ride with Mr. Forkner, the demonstration in the land showings, and in the statements made relative to product and actual production was quite, for me, educational.

Among other things, apart from this material wealth that is being added to the resources of Fresno county, almost within the city limits, I learned:—

That, under the old system of colonization, it required from fifteen to twenty-five years in which to make the individual holding self-supporting, each man holding varying ideas as to what the land might be good for—and for trenling it in his planting.

In the sale of a piece of land, the J. C. Forkner Fig Gardens people improve the land immediately to the best possible advantage and bring the fig gardens into bearing in from four to seven years.

In this procedure, it has been demonstrated that the successful development of a country has been reduced from 15 to 20 years down to one-fourth of that time.

The new colonization system, it has been proven, is putting the cost money into the improvement of the land, while, under the old system that money went into the pockets of the land owner and the colonist sweat blood for ten years longer than necessary.

As War-Workers.

I also learned, in this trip of mine out to the river section, that in this planting of fig gardens there is more being done for the war period benefit than is at first realized.

After the land is levelled and the new fig gardens are planted, many of the purchasers are moving upon the property, building little homes, and are farming the land between the trees. In my trip through these thousands of acres of trees, I saw little homes here and there; I saw corn planted between the rows of the trees: I saw barley and wheat: I saw tobacco, and I was told that this land produces an especially god-quality Turkish tobacco. There are thirty acres of this tobacco now growing. I was told that five Greeks will make a net profit of from five to seven thousand dollars from this thirty acres of tobacco.

This tobacco was planted in June and harvested in August. Mr. Forkner tells me that he expects several hundred acres of tobacco to be planted on the fig gardens this coming season.

Another man, a Mr. Cooney, of San Jose, planted beans between the rows of his trees, and the every appearance is that he will make a sufficient amount of money in this adventure to more than pay the cost of the care of the orchard this year.

More in Promise.

It is the intention, I believe, to have a very large acreage of corn, wheat, barley, tobacco and vegetables of many varieties to be planted this coming season between the rows of the young fig trees. This is being carried out very successfully because there is an abundance of water for irrigation, so that these fig gardens are serving two purposes at the present time. They will be producing figs for the joy and comfort of the soldiers when they return from abroad, and they are doing their share today to win the war in the production of things that are needed today.

Last year was a very successful year, for there are now in evidence 4,300 acres of little fig trees, each tree standing up straight and brave like a soldier. This is really a sight to behold.

I saw large 30-horse-power tractors plowing and leveling land, and was told that 1,60 acres of figs would be planted this coming season.

Some Water Difficulties.

In my drive, I came to a 160-acre tract of figs, and was told of some of the difficulties of the preparation of hog-wallow land, in shooting the hard pan and planting the trees in such a large undertaking. Last season was a bad season for planting. It did not rain until February 20. When the rain did start, it came down nine inches before it stopped. Then it ceased and the land immediately became dry. It was decided to plant 160 acres of land in the hog-wallows, without any levelling, and level the land in June and July. This was ordered done and was done. The holes were shot, and the little trees were placed in these holes out in the hog-wallows. In June, teams were sent among these little trees and this land was levelled, and had I not been told the above facts, I could not have determined the difference between these 160 acres and all the other areas where the land had been levelled previously. In fact, I really believe that the trees looked better where the land was levelled after the planting. This may not seem to the reader a very difficult thing to do, but I am told that no one would advise such an operation. In such a large undertaking, many tactics must be resorted to.

Pertinent Questions.

Since making the trip over these fig gardens, I have been thinking of what all this undertaking means:

What in return does the man get who buys one of these fig gardens?

What does it mean to the county of Fresno, and to the City of Fresno?

What does it mean to the State of California to have these thousands of acres of figs planted and brought into a state of bearing?

As to the man who is doing it, that is merely an incident. His work is soon over with. As far as he is concerned, he will pass out of the activities, but these fig trees will remain for hundreds of years.

The man who buys a 10 or 20 acre fig garden and keeps it, will have for himself, and his children, and his children's children, even unto the 10th generation, independence from want and care.

This community will receive an annual benefit even unto the 10th generation and beyond.

The merchants of Fresno, the lawyers, preachers and doctors of Fresno, and all the men and women in this state, and everyone, will receive directly or indirectly, a profit from these 6,000 acres of figs, as long as this city stands.

Construction Work.

This is a real work, and every work of this kind, whether it is a 10-acre plantation, or a greater acreage, should be encouraged by every progressive thinker in this community, for the community is really indebted to the man or woman who put their money in the purchase of land, build ditches, plant the trees or vines, and the long years of waiting for the fruitage, because no vine or trees can be planted and brought to production within a radium of 100 miles of the city of Fresno that does not directly tend to the upbuilding of this wondrous city of the south.

PRODUCERS GET $3 PER 100 FOR MILK

The San Joaquin Valley Milk Producers are sending out their monthly checks. Their payments are made on a basis of $3 per 100 pounds of 3.5 per cent butter fat milk, meaning an average of about 26 cents a gallon, the best bringing nearly 30 cents. On a butter fat basis, the sour churning cream is bringing 59 1-4 cents, according to Manager F. W. Hansen, and the sweet cream 64 1-4 cents.

The board of directors this week made arrangements with the Alfalfa Growers' Association for quantities of hay. A profitable winter for the producers is predicted throughout the valley.

WEEKLY COMMENTS

By CHARLES H. SHINN

In such times as these, when all things are revalued, and either cast aside or become precious possessions, single poems, bits of age-old philosophy, and now and then a book, read once or twice years ago suddenly stands out like great Sierra peaks, dominating a thousand square miles.

Such a book, and by a Californian, first shaped as eight lectures in Boston about twelve years ago, is Josiah Royce's "Philosophy of Loyalty" which MacMillan issued in 1908. A reprint is much needed, with a brief study of his life and work, also a portrait.

The glory of this book is in its perfect adaptation to every deep human crisis, in family, in community, in nation or in the world; his doctrine of "loyalty to loyalty" will truly help each and all of us. If you doubt this, read the chapters on "Conscience" and on "Loyalty and Religion." See how they "belong" to this hour, to fighting, to food-saving, to "making the world safe for democracy."

The scarcity of paper may prevent it, but a cheap edition of this book ought to be in every one of the soldier and sailor libraries. It is so clearly written and so fundamentally right in its American spirit, and its supreme "loyalty" that every one of our boys will get good from its pages.

"Mike" Williams' Book.

Californians who begin to read Michael Williams' new book "The High Romance" issued the other day by the MacMillans, will rub their eyes and say: "Just what sort of literature is this? fiction, autobiography, polemics, creative sociology,—or what? And is not this author our old Mike Williams who started as a reporter on the San Francisco Examiner, becoming City Editor there about fourteen years ago and one of the shining lights of the literary Carmel-by-the Sea colony?"

Williams became a sociologist, then came to the conclusion that the only refuge for man, the only hope for civilization is in the Catholic Church. For a time he edited The Monitor and planned a big study of "Old San Francisco," but was fortunately led to the present book which begins at Halifax and ends in the pine forests of Carmel. It is the story of many years of searching by a deeply earnest man for the place where he truly belongs, for that which is for him the Holy Grail on the mystic mountain.

Such a spiritual autobiography as this book inevitably makes one think at times of John Henry Newman's memorable "Apologia pro Vita Sua." Thus read, not for the surface narrative but for the inner truth one must think of Newman, of some of Chesterton's stories and of the plays of Claudels. Perhaps, dear reader, you can find what the late Charles Warren Stoddard wrote about "A Troubled Heart and How it was Comforted"—by returning to Mother Church.

We close, as we began, by speaking of the pleasure that Californians will take in the local things of this volume, such as this:

"The little Lark that sang so blithly, and whose lyric voice carried so far (I remember it reached me away off in Canada, where I was living when Bruce Porter, Gellett Burgess Porter Garnett and the others sent it winging from the Golden Gate) was itself a "lark" of that gay company of writers, painters and newspaper men who foregathered in Coppa's under the wierd frescoes."

It is a long time since we have had a more quotable book in hand from a Californian, or one which is likely to arouse more discussion.

Unfinished Tales

The hardest thing a writer has to do is to stop at the absolutely right place, and not meander lamely along until the whole thing stands in the shallows.

Let us consider Marion Hills' "The Toll of the Road." She is the bright woman who wrote that Florida novel "McAllister's Grove." In her new book the heroine, Gert Hall small town type, engaged to a hard-working dullard, but becomes interested in the bit theatrical; and the author depicts this remarkably well. There is a dangerously sentimental "leading man" in the company, but the story stops at the point where the heroine breaks her engagement with Terry and goes back to "the road" with Lorrimer. She has chosen, and henceforth means to live her own life in her own way. But the book gives us no confidence that she can and will run straight, fight a winning fight against temptations of every sort—nor does it imply that she will not. It seems to need a second volume. (Appleton & Co. $1.50 net.)

From the same firm we have Emerson Hough's new novel, "The Way Out," whose scenes are mainly in the Kentucky mountains. It is full of feuds, sorrows, ignorance, and struggle for better things. The hero, David Joslin, takes hold of the reader, and so does Mrs. Marcia Haddon of New York, whose husband, a "bad egg" of a man immensely rich, dies in a most dramatic way and leaves Marcia free. By this time Joslin has fought desperately up, and is trying to help his mountain people to more education. Then the war comes, and he goes. Marcia takes up the work of helping the mountaineers. The implication that sooner or later Joslin and Marcia will be together in this work as husband and wife is made plain by the author, and still varied problems and complications intervene so that, if Mr. Hough so desires, he can easily give us another volume.

STEPHANE LUSANNE,
Editor and Author of "Fighting France."

There are plenty of thrilling and quotable scenes, but on the whole "The Way Out" is less definite than the author's "Broken Gate" or his "Magnificent Adventure." The truth is that Miss Murfree ("Charles Egbert Craddock") has done more solid work in this field of the mountain-folk and their struggles than Emerson Hough, excellent writer as he is, gives us in "The Way Out." ($1.50 net.)

Some New Books

"Knights of the Air" by Lieutenant Bennett A. Molter, is full of the thrill of almost unbelievable adventure. Alas for those of us who are either too young or too old to have some of these ourselves! But here's a dream fulfilled—the French print newspapers in German and fliers scatter them over the land of the Hun. They are really liberal and outspoken "tracts" and tell the truth as the allied nations see it, but are also "eminently fair and devoid of malice." This is an Appleton book. ($1.50 net.)

"A Village in Picardy" is by Miss Ruth Gaines of Smith College Relief Unit. It is an etching that will live long. She has put Canizy Village on the map and we fall in love with its heroic people, suffer with it, realize what American women mean over in France, where they will be needed for years to come. Such relief work as this will re-create our war-broken world.

This is from E. P. Dutton: $1.50 net.

"A Daughter of the Land" is by that tireless author, Gene Stratton Porter; six million copies of whose books have been sold. It is an epic of young womanhood, and of battles for liberty—not license, but real true-hearted freedom of the sort for which American armies are crossing the ocean. Kate, the heroine, finds it a long hard road. She is a magnificent woman, and comes out on top. (Doubleday Page & Co. $1.40 net.)

"The Red Battle Flyer" by Manfield Von Richthoven (McBride & Co. $1.25); "The White Flame of France" by Maude Radford Warren (Small, Maynard & Co. $1.50 net.) "The German Pirate" by "Ajax," (Doran & Co. 75 cents); "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" by Vincente Ibanez, (Dutton & Co. $1.00 net); "Shot with Crimson" by George Barr McCutcheon (Dodd, Mead & Co., $1.00 net.)

"The Boys' Book of Mounted Police" is by Irving Crump and comes from Dodd Mead & Co. for $1.35 net. Heroic public service stories all told with real force. It ought to send older readers to a still bigger book—Miss Mayo's "Justice for All."

Scribner's publish an American series of "Heroes and Leaders." Wilbur Fiske Gordy writes about Lincoln. It costs but 75 cents and may lead on up to Nicolay's big "Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Miss Kay of New York

Some weeks ago we received a charming story for children. "The Book of Seven Wishes," by Miss Gertrude Alice Kay, which Moffat Yard & Co. publish. She is also the author of "When the Sand-Man Comes," and this week we are able to present a dozen articles on war questions; one picture from one of her last photographs.

Rand of Chicago issues Miss Fe[illegible] dale's "Child Life in other Lands" ([illegible] cents net.)

Periodicals—The Atlantic

To begin with, let us remind our readers that right now, in the midst of war, the opportunity has come for far-sighted publishers to make a better, more influential magazine on the Pacific Coast than we have had since the days of Bret Harte's Overland. You see, this new "zone system" breaks up and completely changes old methods of distributing eastern publications out here. If it is permanent, it seems like local magazines will begin to take deeper root. Will they be wise enough to secure writers of nation-wide standing, and themselves seize upon the greater issues, without neglecting local issues and local writers?

Now here is the Atlantic Monthly for August and for September, two strong and really remarkable issues. "The Common Foe," by Dr. L. P. Jacks of Oxford, is a completely unanswerable indictment of that in the German character which the world proposes to reform. If a California magazine could secure and print such an able paper, it would make people sit up and take notice.

In the September Atlantic, we have a short story, "The Miracle," by Miss V. H. Friedlander, which is a splendid study of everyday human nature. Its simple meaning sums up in Kipling's "We are of one blood." Sure!

These two issues contain a round dozen articles on war questions; one of the best is by Vernon Kellogg, our Californian, who is one of Hoover's most able helpers. In October we shall have at least two very serious-minded papers one on "The Duty of Hatred," another describing "The Noncombatant's Manual of Arms." We close this final Atlantic Monthly talk with the remark that it is and will remain one of the indispensable magazines in California as elsewhere.

TABLE GRAPES CUT BY HALF

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 13.—Shipments of California table grapes to eastern markets will be restricted [illegible] per cent as a result of the damage done [illegible] by the recent rains, growers said today. Growers will lose millions of dollars, he said.

The table grape crop in California last year was valued at $[illegible]. About 14,000 carloads were sent to eastern markets. So far this year only 7,000 carloads have been shipped.

Sheehan said he believed the loss to raisin growers would be minimized by the fact that they had ample warning to get their drying trays under cover.

Two Brothers Now in France

Fred is bugler in the 144th Field artillery Battery "E", better known as the "Grizzlies." Frank Campidonico is also in the Grizzlies. Both are sons of Mrs. M. Campidonico, 860 Thorne avenue, and brothers of Julia Campidonico, Mrs. Rose Stone and Mrs. Peter Droge. Word has been received of the safe arrival of both boys in France.

Republican Brings "Home Near" to California Boys

France, Aug. 10, 1918.
Editor, The Fresno Morning Republican,

Sir:—Several copies of your valuable paper received here, to the joy of a number of Central California boys here. Its Sunday features seemed to bring home right over herex and it was read and reread to the last column.

Mention was made of a number of our friends and gave us an idea of conditions that we could have gained in no other way.

In return for the pleasure it gave us, I take great pride in sending our A. E. F. paper that probably will give one more human interest stories than a whole library at home or any other sheet on the globe. And whose personnel is composed entirely of members of the A. E. F. We couldn't do without it.

I know that the people at home wonder how the army live, what they do, and I sincerely believe that through this copy a number may gain a clearer idea of army life, as it is over here.

Respectfully,
(Signed) Sgt. FLOYD C. HORN,
Headquarters, Flight 800th Aero. Repair Squadron, A. E. F.

Under separate cover please find "The Stars and Stripes" our A. E. F. newspaper.

15,000 Miles Separate These Two Brothers

Lester Reed (upper) and Horace Reed.

Nearly 15,000 miles separate these two brothers, yet both are in the service of Uncle Sam.

Almost at the same time that Mrs. Horace G. Reed received word of her husband's safe arrival in France with the 44th Balloon corps, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reed of 147 J street, got word that their other son, Lester W. Reed, had landed safely n Siberia with the American Expeditionary Forces.

Mother Gives Her Three Sons to Help Win War

The three only sons of Mrs. Epperson, 1425 Florodara Ave, have answered the call of Uncle Sam.

The youngest, Emery Epperson, is now in France. Claud Epperson was in Italian waters on a U. S. torpedo boat destroyer when last heard from and Grover Epperson, the oldest son, is at the Arcadia California saloon school. Grover is a partner in the firm of Jackson-Epperson and is well known as an auto and motorcycle racer, holding the record for motorcycles on Toll House Hill.

Meets His Pal Going to Front

Charles Shankland (upper) and Claude Shankland.

Charles Shankland and Claude Shankland are both in France where Charles announces in a letter to his sister that he was made a sergeant on July 2.

"Just came back to a rest camp from the front," he writes in a letter dated August 3, "and we went through some of the biggest drives and did splendid work. Am gunner on one of the big French guns. Have fired several rounds since my arrival here and have had some mighty thrilling experiences, all of which I will tell you on my return to the U. S.

"Our officers are splendid men. On my return from the front I met my pal Dickerson from Lemoore, who enlisted at the same time I did. He was on his way to the front. We had time only to exchange a few words and had to move on. Have been far across the River Marne and on the trail of the Germans."

Dinuba Soldier Died as Hero on Battlefield

TULARE, Sept 14.—Telling how Corporal Franklin Ichenson heroically went to meet his death, the following letter was read at Dinuba Lodge 385 F. & A. M. meeting Thursday night:

Base Hospital.

Dear Brother Secy. Dinuba No. 395 California:

With a mixture of feelings of profound sorrow and regret as well as pride and high appreciation of his supreme sacrifice, I take this opportunity of announcing to Dinuba Lodge the passing of our Brother and Comrade, Franklin Richardson in line of duty on the field of honor in the service of his country, the morning of July 15.

The task to be performed was most important, but almost a suicidal feat, Brother Richardson and his teammate Carroll White also from Dinuba at once volunteered to go out. They had accomplished their mission and were about to return, when the fatal shrapnel did its deadly work:

"Rich" as we all knew him, was the favorite of his section, aye, of his company, no man could possible speak or think ill of him. Promotion was in store for him should it have been the will of the Grand Master of the Universe to have spared him to us longer. He at all times enjoyed the respect and confidence of his superiors, the reverence and esteem of those ranking under him. The landmarks of true masonry were always his rule and

The "Thor" Electric Washing Machine is the laundress who is always on the job. The "Thor" is a laundress who does her work well, week after week, and gets it done in about half the time it takes doing it the old-fashioned way.

The "Thor" will wash for you while you are occupied with other duties; all that is needed is to put the washing in the "Thor," turn on the switch, and in an hour's time the wash is ready for the line.

Think of the weariness you will be spared and then decide on a "Thor."

Selman Describes Hot Fight With Crack Hun Troops

Corporal Paul E. Lewis.

FOWLER, Sept. 7.—Corporal Paul E. Lewis, formerly of Selma, a grandson of Mrs. R. C. Lewis and nephew of Mrs. Charles Nelson of this place tells a stirring tale of battle with the crack German force. Lewis enlisted last December at Ft. McDowell, and left the following month for Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, where he remained only ten days before going to Camp Greene, North Carolina. He went overseas in May. He has recently been promoted to "Corporal." His last letter follows:

Somewhere in France, July 21, 1918.

Dear Mother: Just a few lines to let you know I am all O. K. We are just back from the front for a little rest and I tell us if I needed it for we sure were on the go for a few days. I readily agree with Sherman about war only I think it is a little worse. This outfit that I am attached to did the best fighting of them all and sure ran the Huns ragged and I can't commence to guess how many we took into camp as prisoners. They all seem to be very young. We were under lots of shell fire, but in the fighting we did, we lost very few men. I have read a great deal while home about Shrapnel but one cannot really appreciate it until one has a few drop around him or sail over his head. If we keep them on the run and I guess we will, I may eat Christmas dinner some again with you. We are all fighting the boches as fast as we can. We are not far from the lines now and can still hear the shells whizzing so please excuse the shortness of this note. I am doing my best and leaving it up to God to do the rest. Love to all.

Corporal Paul E. Lewis.
Co. "C" 5th Field Sig. Battalion, A. E. F., France.

Gives War Whoop as He Goes Over Top in Charge

WOODLAKE, Sept. 14.—Perhaps its because he hails from Antelope valley that Corporal Roy L. Davis, company "C" 364th U. S. infantry, at present located "Somewhere in France," assumed this posture.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson J. Davis of the Antelope valley district and since entering the military service over a year ago has made a splendid record for himself. He received his preliminary training in the Woodlake Home Guard unit to which he owes much of his success in the regular organization, he says. He gives in the picture the spirit of "Our Boys" when they make it. Over The Top" against the Huns. He quotes on the opposite side of the photo "Jumping the trenches in a charge. Even caught the cell that we give to scare the Germans. That isn't a look of agony, just a war whoop!"

FEAR OF RAIN IS NOW OVER

After being threatened for three days with rain, Fresno is now safely passed the danger line, according to W. E. Bonnell, local weather forecaster. That Fresno should escape from the rain when all points along the coast from Los Angeles to Eureka were having considerable rain fall, seems almost unbelievable, but, nevertheless is a happy fact. There were light showers in the eastern part of the city, last night but no damage was done to crops. Slower indications for this vicinity have completely disappeared.

Today will be fair, and slightly warmer, with light northwest wind.

Norman Beall Tells of Trench Life

Norman Beall.

Writing to his mother, Mrs. Nettie V. Beall, 945 N street from a "third line trench" in France, Corporal N. W. Beall of the 4th Engineers who enlisted in the service of his country May 28, 1917 and has been in France since last April describes the Hun artillery fire. He says: "They have been shelling us with some large gun, must be an 8 or 10 inch and when they come over they sound like that big whistle on the Pacific Coast Raisin company's plant in Fresno when it blows the high notes. We are working in the third line trenches and today a 5-inch shrapnel came down in about 100 feet of where I was working several breaking over us, but doing no damage. And we dug up the one that struck the ground. There is artillery all around us and it keeps booming night and day. Saw the Allies bring down a German plane the other day it was a pretty sight, must have fell a mile. We were quite close to it, it caught fire and was burning while it fell. We were shelled last week while at work with those big guns and it was a pretty sight to see them bursting in the grain field about a quarter of a mile away. We work close to a Red Cross dressing station and see lots of our American soldiers coming in wounded, and some dead. I also saw them bring in some German prisoners, and saw the 73 Germans that one of our American, captured single handed. That was the truth alright. Those poor Germans sure did look forlorn and disgusted. They were most of them of the lower class of Germans. We are expecting to leave any minute for the front lines and I feel that I am just as safe there as here, and we are all anxious to go and get it over with, so some of us can get home. I guess every body will be having a good time tomorrow. But I think that we will probably have more fire works here in a few minutes than Fresno county will see all day. We walk up on a hill here at night and see the fire works almost any night and its very pretty. We get 7 days furlough after we are here 4 months. The French furnish fresh horse meat mostly to their soldiers so I had to learn to eat it. A fellow can do most anything when he has to. But we are getting American rations now and it is fine and dandy. The country here is beautiful, mostly rolling hills with lots of trees and every thing is green puts me in mind of Oregon. The people that are left here are the peasant class that are too poor to move away, the rest have gone long ago. Its sure pitiful to see some of them, women with 5 or 6 kids the husband killed off. But they make pretty good now waiting for the soldiers.

I am going to steal their wooden shoes they keep me awake nights running down the street to the dugouts. When they shell the town sounds like a bunch of horses running over the cobbles. Well I will have to close for this time, tell all the folks to write often so some of the letters get here. And tell me all the news. I will close with love to all.

FORBIDS PREMIUMS FOR DAILY PAPERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Additional orders affecting the publishing of newspapers were announced today by Chairman Baruch of the war industries board to bring about a further saving of print paper.

The board rules that publishers shall not use premiums, contests or similar means to stimulate circulation, that no holiday, industrial or special issues shall be published and that papers shall not be sold at retail for less than the published price.

Legitimate methods of stimulating circulation are held to be bill board and dead wall poster advertising, buying space in contemporary papers, announcing special features, making announcement in Sunday or daily editions of special features to come, and canvassing without premiums.

GOOD WORDS FOR STONE IN ITALY

ROME, Thursday, Sept. 12.—The [illegible] in honor of Melville E. Stone, general manager of The Associated Press, which took on the character of a demonstration of Italo-American friendship.

The guests included members of the cabinet, senators, deputies and newspapermen without distinction of party.

Premier Orlando sent a message from the front to Stone as a tribute to the organization which the guest of honor represented, and praised the fraternal solidarity of the Italian and American press as "precious collaboration in the common work."

Deputy Andrea Torre, president of the Press Association, welcomed Mr. Stone in the name of the entire Italian press. Francisco Nitti, minister of the treasury, speaking in the name of the government, expressed its strong faith that the co-operation of America in the war would lead to a definite victory. He proposed toasts to President Wilson and the American army.

In reply, Mr. Stone expressed his thanks in the name of his country, pointing out both Italy and America were inspired in this war by the same ideals. Amid great applause, he proposed the health of King Victor Emmanuel and a toast to the Italian army.

A notable incident was the presentation to Mr. Stone of an Italian flag on which the names of those present were inscribed.

He said he would take the flag to America and preserve it as a memento.

MACHINE GUN OFFICERS OF FRESNO IN FRANCE

Captain Lloyd T. Stephenson, First Lieutenant Frank Everts and Second Lieutenants James Madison, Jr., and Irving Toomey, who left Fresno as the officers of Company C, 145th Machine Gun Battalion, are now in France. Captain Stephenson is now commanding Company B, 145th Machine Gun Battalion, but the others are still with Company C.

The machine gun battalion first went to England, but remained there only a few days before crossing the channel.

Mayor W. F. Toomey has received three letters from his son, Irving Toomey, since the latter arrived overseas, in which he related some interesting and humorous incidents.

Among the first things Irving said was that he did not see any pretty girls during his stay in England, but in Liverpool he said he never saw so many dirty faced kids at any one time and all begged for a cent.

"I nearly got run over three times on Tuesday," he wrote, adding that he would not now forget how traffic moved over there.

A number of officers went into an English restaurant and the problem they worked out of making change in English money, he said would have made a good act on the Orpheum.

Lieutenant Toomey saw his first German prisoners, working about a camp in which he was stationed.

"Some of them were awfully young looking," he wrote, "while others were of a dogged type who would appear as not caring whether they got any place or not.

Toomey had one shave in an English barber shop and swore off entirely thereafter. His description of his shave follows:

"I went into a barber shop and he went down one side of my face and then the other and when he had finished that he started on my neck and went back up against the grain all the way. I just shut my eyes and let him go, praying all the time for him to get the agony over quick. I swore off on English barber shops."

Some of the difficulties encountered in getting a drink of water in France were also described by Toomey. "Honest to grandma, dad, a fellow over here has to learn to drink wine or go without drinks at meals," he wrote. "I had to make signs like washing my face in my plate to get some water to drink with my supper."

Lieut. Edwards Now in Command of His Company

Lieutenant Jeff Edwards.

Lieut. Jeff Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Edwards, 1857 J. street, is at Camp Funston, Kans. and in a recent issue of "Trench and Camp," the soldiers' camp paper, his transfer from the 20th Infantry to the new 70th is announced as a distinct loss to the old twentieth.

"Lieut. Edwards, 'F' Company, 70th Infantry," says "Trench and Camp" "was five years in the service prior to the date of his commission last year. He is an authority on army paper work. While in the 20th he was attached to 'G' company and the supply company."

In a letter written to his father and "all the folks" last month, Lieut. Edwards tells how he enjoyed his visit home.

"Your good letter of the 12th was received this noon," he writes; "and I will waste no time answering it. In the first place you didn't get ALL the sunshine from my visit home; I got my share and consider myself a very lucky man. I am sure that if I had waited ten days for my leave, I would have failed to get it and would have regretted it all the while I was overseas. I just can't tell you how good you and everyone was to me nor how much I appreciated it.

"When I finally got back I learned that, while on leave, I had been transferred from my old regiment and attached to the newly formed Seventieth Infantry. I have 'F' company and as the captain is unfit for duty, on account of appendicitis, and I rank the rest of them, I am for the present company commander. I like it, but it is a grown person's job being daddy to 250 young bucks. I can't seem to get a minute to myself, but will find time to get a letter home once a week."

guide in his transactions with his fellows. He met all mankind upon the level, lived the just and upright life and gloriously parted from us upon the square, following his guide with never a thought of danger or peril. His course among mortals—true was short, but Oh, how nobly run—and so grandly finished. Let us then not grieve for him, but expectingly await the moment of reunion in the Celestial Lodge—the house not made with hands. He was my most personal friend and brother extending back to our first meeting—our close relationship in Masonic affairs in the States and over here. But this is war. WILD CAT VISITS CITY

A large wild cat was seen playing on the Washington grammar school grounds early yesterday morning by B. Edwards, watchman of the Sperry Flour Mills. The animal was described as being as large as a dog and appeared fairly tame. It is believed that it may have escaped from the circus Thursday. The creature disappeared from view before it could be captured.

Both Brothers Are Crack Shots

The Lorentzen brothers of O'Neals, Cal., are both in France. Their sister, Annie Keller, just received a letter from Private John Lorentzen announcing his arrival in France. He left O'Neals October 1, 1917, for Camp Lewis and went overseas with the 348th Infantry.

He made the highest score in his company as a rifle shot and W. F. Lorentzen, his brother, who is also overseas, recently made a score of 61 bull's-eyes out of 65 shots, 31 of them being rapid fire, so their sister feels they will be able to account for a few Huns.

76 DAYS ON DESERT ISLE

Experience of Wayman Doyle

A little coral island in the South Seas deserted save for a few Kanakas, imported to gather guano for shipment to England, was the home of Wayman C. Doyle of Fresno for 76 days. Doyle was a member of the crew of the British bark Murray, which struck a reef near the island, while carrying a cargo of gasoline and dynamite, and blew up. The crew all escaped with their lives, but with little else.

A short time after the Murray was wrecked, the schooner Annie Larsen struck the same reef within a hundred yards of the spot where the Murray went down and it too went to the bottom. The white colony on this island for the greater part of the two and one-half months numbered 53.

Doyle is a son of the late Dr. B. W. Doyle of Fresno and for a number of years was moving picture operator at the Kinema. He was born in Fresno and lived here all his life.

Rejected by all branches of the United States army and navy, Doyle joined the British mercantile marine and it was as a sailor in this service that he underwent his experience in the South Seas.

The story of the shipwreck and his eleven weeks' stay on Malden Island is very interestingly told in the following letter received by his wife, Sophia E. Doyle, 202 College avenue:

At Sea, off Fiji Islands.
August 15, 1918.

Well, I'm writing this to mail at Suva, a Samoa island post, where we are going to coal. Oh, my! What a time we've had! But I'd better start at the beginning.

Everything went fine leaving San Francisco, and we had fine weather all the way. We were on the way to make a record passage to Melbourne. I was enjoying every minute of it. Had a good job, running the gasoline power plant for the lights and wireless. The crew as a whole got along fine and were for the most part good fellows.

Well, we were all congratulating ourselves on our luck, but on the morning of May 22, at 3:40 a. m., bang! splash! we went on the outer reef of a little guano and coral island in the middle of the ocean. The darned old ship started to break up immediately, and being loaded with dynamite and gasoline, we had to get out in a hurry. There wasn't a man on board except time to dress either. We all lost everything. I got ashore with an old pair of shoes and a suit of B. V. D. and my old blue serge pants. My watch, clothes, papers, everything, went to Davy Jones' locker when the "Murray" blew up. And you're lucky you still have a husband, for if we had not made a record in lowering the life boats and getting away, there would not be many of our crew of twenty-nine left. We were in the boats and clear of the ship just thirty minutes after she struck.

Row Away in Dark

Well, after we had rowed about two miles away from the ship we waited for daylight, for all this time was just at the darkest part of the day, just before dawn, and you couldn't see ten feet away. No one, not even the captain, knew just where we were. Most all of us thought we had struck an uncharted rock, and we were getting ready for a long row to the nearest land. When it got day we could just barely see this little island about four miles away. Gee! but it did look good, even if it was only a coral reef island and only fifteen feet above sea level. Not a thing grows there, and there is no water on it that you can drink—only millions of sea birds and guano. The island ("Malden" is its name) is only 240 miles from the equator and is nice and hot. It is under lease from the British government to an Australian firm, who export the guano to England. A white manager and fourteen Kanaka boys are on the island, and are relieved by a new crew every year, on June 10. Well, we thought we were in luck, as the manager had some supplies there and tobacco, so we settled down to wait for the little island schooner that was due June 10, only about three weeks off. Well, we waited and June 16 or 17 and no schooner had come yet, and provisions were getting very low; so the captain and two men filled out one of the life boats and, taking grub and water for thirty days, set sail for Fanning island, over 300 miles away. Well, we thought sure then that he would make it and we would be away by the tenth of July. But no such luck. July the man at the wheel and the lookout who was fully dressed, and we had no almost went by, and we were still there, living on almost nothing but rice and fish. Oh, Lord! how I hate fish!) So then the other life boat was made ready, as we had given Captain Vaughn and the boys up for lost, and the first mate, Mr. Chugg and two seamen and three native yeomen of the islands, set sail for Samoa, a distance of about 1,300 miles.

Sight Relief Ship

They had been gone about nine or ten days when on the morning of August 6 at 5 o'clock the native fisher boy discovered a light out at sea off the island. We remembered our one and only chance of rescue since we had been there and took no chances. The time I speak of was about sixteen days after we struck. Just at sundown a ship was sighted coming around the point of the island, and we wanted to launch a boat and sail out and intercept her, but the captain wouldn't hear of it. We built a monster big fire and shot off two light signals, but she just kept right on going, so we lost our chance. As I was saying, we remembered that incident, and, saying nothing to anybody the gang launched the boat and sailed out to meet the light, while I and my pal, a young American chap, went up in the signal mast with a keg of powder and set off big powder flares to attract their attention. Of course, we did not know until we got on board that Captain Vaughn had made it all right and this was the relief ship sent by the government to get us.

Now I will go back to the day of the wreck. God! That is one day I never shall forget. I've read of many shipwrecks, but you don't realize the utter helplessness of a few puny men and a little boat against the terrible power of those big seas on that reef. The "Murray" was a big steel ship, and it just picked her up and smashed her down on those rocks like a little toy. The big steel masts were snapped off like toothpicks, steel mine cables holding them were actually pulled to bits and they were 1 1-2 inches in diameter. As we lost sight of the "Murray" when we rounded the point of the island to land, there was just her hulk and one mast left standing. We landed down by the settlement as that is the only place on the island where the reef will let a little boat any way near the beach, and were given a cup of tea and two or three ships biscuits, and then we started overland to the wreck, along the guano railroad. The island is triangular shaped and the railroad runs about half way between the shore of the atoll lake in the middle and the shore, and it runs the other way than toward the wreck. The island is 22 miles in circumference and the railroad runs two-thirds of the way around it. Well, we started out on that railroad with a light surf boat on a little truck, and we had to push it by hand about 12 miles. Lord, I never will forget that trip. It was terribly hot and very few of us had hats and almost none of us shirts. After we had gone six miles from the camp we got to where the native boys were working guano and they joined us then and did most of the hard work.

Wreck Disappears

You see when we got to the wreck we expected to see her still on the rocks and thought we could get on board and get our things and some food supplies, but when after 4 1-2 hours at gruelling work we got to the beach by the big reef there was nothing in sight except great piles of broken-up wreckage in the surf and on the beach. She had blown up and sunk. All the part with the stores of food had blown back off the reef and sunk in deep water. Believe me, that was sure a shock to us. I didn't mind losing anything so much as my watch. The clothes I can replace, but the watch never. I would have saved it but I had given it to the first mate to keep for me so it wouldn't get broken and it was locked in the safe in his room below in the cabin. I had no chance to save it and he didn't even save his own things. Money and all went down.

Well, we got back to the camp about nine o'clock that night, all of us utterly exhausted. We just lay down anywhere and went to sleep, not even caring about anything to eat.

The next day the kanaka boys began to pick out their friends and to give each one clothes and bedding. The old second yeoman picked me out and gave me a big native mat to sleep on and his pillow, a couple of undershirts and a pair of overalls. I in turn gave him that old signet ring I've worn for so long. It nearly tickled him to death, and from then on I was known as his brother. He took my name and I was given his. It was funny to hear the natives calling him "Soyal". That was as near as they could pronounce it. My name is "Ngatapa."

The Annie Larsen Wreck

Well, we got along fairly well then and at daylight one morning the native cook boy for the manager came running up with the news that a schooner was ashore near the "Murray" wreck. Gosh, we thought it was the island schooner. Half the boys went to the wreck on land and the rest of us stayed behind to launch the boat, if necessary. But receiving no signal, we all went down there and helped land all the food supplies and personal belongings off her onto the beach. It was the little American schooner "Annie Larsen", without any cargo, on her way to Tahati. She had run up on the reef within 100 yards of the wreck of the "Murray" and is a total wreck. We saved everything off her, though, and that helped us out. The crew of 7 men with the captain, his wife and two little children and the old mate came ashore and that brought our colony up to 53 people on the island.

This happened one week before Captain Vaughan left. Little petty quarrels came up but as a whole we all got along very well together. I'll write you more about the details later. Many funny incidents occurred and the whole thing reads like some wild novel.

The ship that took us off is the big Australian freighter "Masaden" and we will be landed in Melbourne in about 12 days from now. Write me there and send me all the decent clothes I have, as I am being sent on a government transport and I don't know whether I am going to sail back to San Francisco or go to Dover, England. All the clothes I have now is a pair of blue serge pants and a pair of undershirts and one outside shirt. It is winter in Australia now, so I guess I will be cold when I get there. The maritime law says that when a ship strikes the pay stops, but as we were on a government ship carrying war cargo the boys on the "Masaden" say we will be paid up to date. If we do I'll have about $160; if we don't I'll have about $7.50 coming.

Needs Clothes Badly

You'll have to find out the quickest way to get the clothes to me and send them that way. I'll take the San Francisco bound transport if I have any choice, so I'll be able to see you all in about three months time. Tell Dad he can send me that old watch of mine if he wants to, as I need some kind of timepiece.

It was terribly lonely on that little island and you were constantly in my mind. I was always wondering what you were doing and if you were thinking what I might be doing. It was just naturally left all the way around, and if I had my choice I think I would choose the trenches rather than another two and a half months on that island. We were there just 76 days.

Tell the gang that if they ever go to sea to pick out a better island to be wrecked on than I did.

This letter will be mailed in Suva and should reach you in about a month, with luck. Just the minute you get it fire me back an answer and it will reach me same boat back.

GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Favorable war news and better weather gave a decided advantage today to the bears in corn. Largely as a result the market finished nervous, 1 to 3 cents net lower, with October $1.52 1/8 to $1.53 1/8, and November $1.49 1/8 to $1.50 1/4. Oats lost 1/4c to 1/2c. The outcome in provisions varied from 10c decline to 12c advance.

Corn developed weakness quickly, and at no time displayed much power to recover.

Oats showed stubborn resistance to selling pressure. The chief reason ascribed was that purchasing had been liberal for the government and the seaboard.

Higher quotations on hogs strengthened provisions. In the late dealings, however, pork evinced something of a tendency to sag.

Close—

Corn—October, $1.52 3/8; November, $1.49 1/8.

Oats—October, 7 1/4c; November, 7 3/4c.

Pork—September, $60; October, $60.40.

WALL STREET FINANCE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—With the stock market exhibiting a strong undertone for the first time this week, general recoveries from the weakness of the last few days featured the Saturday short session in trading. Indications were clear that the stringency in money to which was attributed the liquidation which has marked the retrograde movement of speculative issues, had been modified at least to a limited extent, and this factor and the continued favorable war news, together with a marked rise in Liberty bonds, served to encourage investment buyers. Short covering at the levels brought about by the recent break also contributed to the firmness, and stocks generally ruled from 1 to 5 points above yesterday's closing quotations.

Issues governed by specific rather than general influences included Mexican Petroleum, which rose 15 points on reports that the Mexican government had granted tax concessions to oil companies; and Wilson Packing Company, which sustained a sharp fractional loss on the probability of federal control of packers' operations in live stock markets.

General Electric and United States Alcohol scored the largest gains, each rising 5 points. United States Steel and other representative issues, including Reading, Southern Pacific and Canadian Pacific, rose between 1 and 2 points, while some of the specialties which have been in the forefront of the recent decline made even greater advances. Sales amounted to 150,000 shares.

Analysis of the bank statement disclosed a much smaller decrease in loans than was commonly expected in view of the drastic liquidation of the week, the retrenchment amounting to only $32,000,000. Surplus reserves in bank, $85,761,220.

Miscellaneous bonds maintained a good tone in sympathy with the improvement in Liberty issues. Total sales, par value, $4,950,000.

United States bonds, old issues, were unchanged on call during the week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $24,951,220 reserves in excess of legal requirements. This is a decrease of $33,781,220 from last week.

IMPRINT OF BLOODY HAND IS MAN'S NEMESIS

Robber Who Held Up Stage and Killed Driver May Be Brought to Bay

Rifled Mail Bag With His Hands After Holding Driver in Seat

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—The bloody imprint of a hand on an envelope taken from a mail bag at Jarbridge, Nev., Dec. 5, 1916, has brought Ben Kuhl within the shadow of the gallows. The impression made by the bloody hand on the paper was submitted to Superintendent C. J. Stone of the Bakersfield criminal identification bureau, who pronounced it corresponded with that of Kuhl and the latter has lost his appeal to the Nevada supreme court, according to advices reaching this city.

The history of the case reads like fiction. It gives one that creepy feeling that follows one for hours after reading one of Conan Doyle's best stories. But nevertheless, the case is a true one, and goes to prove that no two persons in the entire world have the same finger or hand or foot prints, the same as there are no two faces alike on earth.

On the night of December 5, 1916, it is alleged, Ben Kuhl held up and murdered a stage driver at Jarbridge, Nev., securing over $5,000, said to be for a mining company's payroll.

About dusk Kuhl mounted the stage and shot the driver in the back of the head. Instead of immediately rifling the mail bags, he held the dead man in position until the stage passed a few houses and some campers along the roadside. A woman in the habit of halting the stage driver, called to him in the usual manner, but received no response, thinking nothing of it until later, when an alarm was sent out on account of the non-arrival of the stage at its destination.

After proceeding some distance up the road, and out of sight, Kuhl began to rifle the mail bags, and secured all the money for the payrolls. After the alarm was sent out, the stage driver was found dead, and the mail bags rifled. A post-office inspector was immediately summoned, and in examining the mail pouches and the letters, found one envelope whereon there was a bloody mark, like a mans finger print. This was sent to the postoffice inspector at San Francisco, who submitted it to the governments finger print expert.

After the postoffice inspector returned the bloodstained envelope to the sheriff of Elko county, Nevada, where the crime was committed, the sheriff submitted the envelope to C. H. Stone, chief of the identification bureau of the Bakersfield police force. Mr. Stone made a careful study of the print on the envelope and hand prints and finger prints of Kuhl and Beck, as well as the man who loaned Beck the pistol.

After making a thorough inspection of the prints, Mr. Stone found that the blood stained envelope contained the imprint of the lower part of Kuhl's left hand, and so informed the sheriff of Elko county, Nevada. When the trial came up last October, Mr. Stone went to Elko and testified, positively identifying the stain on the envelope as a duplicate of Kuhl's left hand. On this evidence Kuhl was convicted and sentenced to be shot (Kuhn's choice of the method of execution) on January 10.

Before that date, attorneys for Kuhl took the case to the supreme court of Nevada, and on Saturday last, the court refused a new trial, and affirmed the lower court's verdict.

The supreme court declared that in rifling the mail sack Kuhl left the bloody imprint of the lower part of his left hand on an envelope, and that such evidence was sufficient to convict. It is stated that this is the first case in an American court in which a decision has been given relative to admission of palm prints as evidence in a trial.

Yesterday Mr. Stone stated that there were over eighteen positive lines and marks of identification exhibited to the jury when he testified in the case last October.

Meanwhile, Ben Kuhl's overcoat had been found some distance from the scene of the murder, but Kuhl denied that it was his coat. Another man testified that it was Kuhl's overcoat, that he himself had given it to Kuhl. A search of Kuhl's cabin revealed a six-shooter with a bloody handle, and a $10 bill containing blood stains, wrapped around some silver coin. One of Kuhl's shirts was found in a creek near his cabin, weighted with a stone. It contained blood stains also, but Kuhl explained that he had shot a rabbit, and the blood stains were from the rabbit. The six-shooter, it was learned, belonged to another man who had loaned it to Ed. Beck, an acquaintance and accomplice of Kuhl. It developed that Beck had borrowed the revolver from the third man, knowing what Kuhl wanted it for. Kuhl denied all knowledge of the crime, but Beck finally confessed and told the plan to hold up the stage, and agreed to get the six-shooter for Kuhl. For this, Beck got life imprisonment.

His long grape arbor on the south side of the house forms a very attractive picture, with its huge clusters of various colored grapes in their setting of green leaves. The dark Pierce, the flaming tokay and the bright sultana rosa are as pleasing to the eye as to the taste.

Bush of Maricopa, all arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace, received fines totalling $35. Elmer Greer was assessed $20 for his part and the other three men $5 each on the showing made by the evidence taken in each case. One other person named Olin Greer, who was arrested on the same charge for the same offense, failed to appear in court and Recorder Heagerty gave him twenty-four hours more in which to appear or have the $50 bail money forfeited.

RIVERDALE, Sept. 14.—The annual state conference of the United Brethren church will meet at Riverdale Tuesday, September 18, at 9 a. m., and continue in session until the following Sunday evening. The annual convention of the Christian Endeavor branch of the church will be held in connection with the conference Tuesday afternoon and evening, September 17.

On Wednesday the Woman's Missionary Society will be in session, morning, noon and evening.

On Sunday morning, September 22, he will preach at the church, after which the appointments of the ministers for the next year will be read. An overflow meeting will be held at Barritt's hall to accommodate those who may not be able to get inside the church.

Rev. L. S. Woodruff of Stockton is superintendent of the church in California and will take an active part in the conference.

Rev. J. L. Parks of Santa Ana is now in Riverdale arranging a musical program. Rev. Parks was pastor of the local church from June, 1913, to June, 1915. He is an excellent musical director and while preaching here conducted a large chorus. He will occupy the pulpit next Sunday morning. Riverdale feels herself honored in being chosen as the gathering place for this conference and the people of the vicinity are making preparations to entertain royally the couple of hundred guests who will be in attendance. The public is cordially invited to attend all sessions.

WILL MAKE SURVEY OF WATER SUPPLY

OAKDALE, Sept. 14.—Directors of the Oakdale Irigation District have begun a personal investigation of the storage possibilities along the Stanislaus river in order that they may be able to submit a first hand report on the needs of the district, so that an intelligent vote may be taken on the necessary bond issue in the spring.

The board visited the site of the proposed Dolones or Copperopolis reservoir this week, where J. H. Cameron of San Francisco, and associates who built the Twin Peaks tunnel, have offered to build a reservoir and sell it to the district, or sell their dam site to the district. A letter was read from Mr. Cameron in which he asked that the districts submit him a definite proposition. Members of the board expressed a doubt as to the advisability of this reservoir because of the mining claims upon it, and the damage suits which construction of a reservoir would entail. Superintendent Nickerson suggested an easy plan of estimating the cost of the structure and its capacity by cross sectioning the riverbed sides, and if the board decides to consider this site such work will be done.

Another proposal was submitted by G. H. Nickerson, superintendent of the district, who stated that the Sierra & San Francisco Power Company were preparing to borrow a million dollars with which to build the upper Strawberry reservoir. This would provide an additional 25,000 acre feet, which the company is willing to sell to the districts at the present price. Mr. Nickerson stated also that the power company would be willing to increase the heighth of the proposed dam, provided the district entered into the cost of construction, and create an additional 25,000 acre feet of storage.

The district has submitted a request also to the Stica Gold Mining Company for definite figures on the proposed Spicer's Meadow project, which is also a joint power and irrigation scheme. The company is willing to build this dam and take bonds for the district's share of the cost.

While no definite action it is probable that one of the three reservoir projects outlined above will be submitted to the land owners in the Oakdale Irrigation District this coming spring. The order of the government that the supply of power must be increased will be directly beneficial to the Oakdale district, as any increase in the storage of water for power purposes will make available an additional supply for irrigation as well.

ACQUIT MOTORIST OF MANSLAUGHTER

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—James Bowen, local pool room proprietor, was acquitted by a jury yesterday of the charge of manslaughter. Bowen was indicted by the grand jury. It was charged that he ran into an automobile in which was riding Genll Pearson, aged 8 years. Pearson was killed. The accident occurred on the county highway more than two years ago.

RELEASE FEDERAL PRISONER.

MODESTO, Sept. 14.—Miss Emma Mann, former forewoman of the Pratt Lowe cannery here, was released when arraigned before the United States commissioner at Stockton yesterday on a charge of making disloyal remarks. Miss Mann stated that if she had made any remarks that might be construed as disloyal to the government, they did not represent her feelings. She was released with the admonition to be more careful in her statements regarding the war.

IMPROVE REEDLEY STREET.

REEDLEY, Sept. 14.—The sidewalk and curbing in front of the Winnes new building on Eleventh street, and extending from alley to H street, is quite an improvement to that portion of the town. The brick building is nearing completion. Mr. Triplett, the photographer, will have one room fitted up for a studio, and the other will be occupied by the county library. Miss McCardle with Mrs. Sager, the local librarian, is overseeing the arrangement of the library.

WILL START DRILLING.

REPUBLICANS ENJOY ANNUAL DINNER IN KERN

Meet at Hotel Tegeler in Bakersfield and Make Campaign Plans

H. E. Barbour and "Yir Frien' Scotty Give Patriotic Talks

(Special to the Republican.)

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—Republicans gathered this evening at Hotel Tegeler and partook of the annual dinner of the Republican county central committee, selected officers and completed organization plans for the coming campaign.

The address of the evening was delivered by Attorney H. E. Barbour of Fresno, Republican candidate for congress, who delivered the keynote speech of the campaign. Mr. Barbour was at his best and gave a ringing, patriotic talk, in which he urged extreme loyalty to the plans of the administration in the prosecution of the war and urged Republicans to forget politics insofar as the matters pertaining to the present titanic struggle are concerned. He advised members of the party not to forget, however, that two years hence a presidential campaign will be carried on and in the event of the success of the Republican party it would be highly essential that the President be backed up by a congress of his own political faith. Mr. Barbour gave a lucid, clear and concise statement of the things he stands for, and which he will advocate if the electors of the district select him as their spokesman at Washington. He was given close attention throughout his address.

"Yir Frien' Scotty," feature writer on the Fresno Republican, was present and made a humorous talk, in which he captivated his listeners with his droll stories and scintillating wit. He talked on the bright and somber sides of the war, told anecdotes of his mule-driving-days-down-in-"old-Missouri," went into ecstacies on the beauties of the valley of the San Joaquin, and complimented the residents of the second city of the valley on their progressive spirit, and at the close of his brief but happy talk was accorded a rousing round of applause.

At the conclusion of the dinner the committee selected A. W. Mason as chairman and D. R. Fitzgerald, secretary.

During the closing hours of the meeting plans were discussed for furthering the best interests of the arty, and seeing to it that the nominees of the August primary are triumphantly elected. There was a large attendance, practically every section of the county being represented.

FARM MARKETING PLAN ORGANIZES

HANFORD, Sept. 14.—Representatives of Kings, Tulare, Kern, Madera and Fresno counties meeting here today started a movement to form what will be known as the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association, the purpose of which will be to co-ordinate the marketing facilities of the farm bureaus of the state. It was the outgrowth of numerous hog auctions that have been staged by the various bureaus in this part of the state recently.

Why Society Women Wash Their Own Hair

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a make-shift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made Canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about 3 cents a shampoo by getting some Canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so full that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.

MOTHER AND SON, NURSE AND SOLDIER, MEET ON WAR FRONT

OAKDALE, Sept. 14.—Although stationed within twenty-six miles of each other, the one as a Red Cross nurse and the other as a soldier, Mrs. Pearl D. Longwell and her son were unaware of the fact until they had opportunity to get each other's address from Oakdale. Mrs. Longwell landed in France six weeks ago as a Red Cross nurse. Her son was already there, but she could not locate him. Her letters were coming to her sister, Mrs. R. F. Strong, in Oakdale, but the son's letters failed to reach her. She wrote home of her dilemma, and the sister here forwarde dthe boy's address, which was of a regiment only a few miles from where the mother was with a Red Cross unit.

The location of each was secret, but through a kindly officer mother and son were allowed to talk to each other over the telephone, and later were able to exchange visits.

Mrs. Longwell has been in Red Cross work for the past six months and was the first Oakdale woman to enter that branch of service. She is a professional nurse.

KINGS CREAMERIES DISBURSE $246,000

HANFORD, Sept. 14.—Dairymen of Kings county will receive an average of 56.5 cents per pound for butterfat delivered to the creameries in August. This will be the basis of Sunday's pay day. The checks aggregate approximately $246,000, being virtually the same as last month.

The Lucerne Cream & Butter Co. of Hanford has set the highest price, 57 cents per pound. Others run from 56 cents to 56.85 cents per pound.

PAYS $5 IN DIVIDENDS.

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., Sept. 14.—The Prairie Oil and Gas Company today declared a quarterly dividend of $3 a share and an extra dividend of $2 a share, payable October 31 to the stockholders of record September 30.

MOUNTAIN STORMS RAISE RESERVOIRS

OAKDALE, Sept. 14.—The rains, which today began to spread to the hills, are filling the mountain reservoirs, and the shortage of power caused by the empty reservoirs will soon be at an end. As a result of the heavy rain, a special meeting of both the Oakdale and the South San Joaquin irrigation districts was held today, and the Sierra & San Francisco Power Company notified to stop sending down storage water for irrigation for the season. The heavy rain has thoroughly soaked the ground, and the land owners in the district will now have sufficient water from the natural flow of the Stanislaus river, augmented as it is by the recent rains. The rainfall in the Oakdale section was over two inches. The only damage was to grapes, of which there are not many, and to grain hay and alfalfa which had not been put under cover. The stockmen will benefit, as will also the rice growers.

BEGIN PLOWING WITH TRACTORS

CHOWCHILLA, Sept. 14.—C. B. Hanner put tractors to work this week plowing two sections of the 500 acres of the Chowchilla ranch lands which were taken over a week ago by the Daniel Hayes Company of Chicago.

A number of the colonists located about six miles from town have organized a church association and expect to erect a building as early as conditions warrant. The movement is beginning as a community church.

A dance is to be held soon to help make up the Chowchilla quota for the Salvation Army's war service.

Rufus Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Brown, was a member of the latest contingent to leave this county for a training camp. This is the third son of this family to join the army.

Mrs. W. P. Coombs has resigned as president of the local Red Cross organization. This was made necessary because of the Coombs family moving away from town, being now engaged in ranching about fifteen miles distant. Mrs. Coombs will not, however, cease assisting in war work.

Jack Shaw and Bas Young have returned to Camp Kearny after spending a brief furlough at home.

B. S. Brother is harvesting some of the finest Phillips Cling peaches in the valley from an orchard just three years old.

Measurement for the first fall of rain for the season—Thursday night—was .66 inch. Some hay was caught in the showers, but in the Chowchilla vicinity there was little other damage so far as learned.

Nine carloads of hay were shipped from here the past few days. A large part of it came from the ranch of E. M. Lantz and was sent to San Francisco.

MARICOPIANS ARRIVE OVERSEAS

MARICOPA, Sept. 14.—J. F. Lingo received word of the safe arrival of his son Charles A. Lingo who was a member of the 26th Engineers corps which left for France last month. Young Lingo and nearly a dozen other Maricopa oil men were in the same regiment and are now on their way to the battle front.

Mrs. Jennie Monden and daughter Frances of Ocean Park are spending the week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Kickland in Maricopa.

J. I. Wagy has leased the agricultural land on his large Ozena ranch in the Cuyama valley for the next year and will devote his entire time to the raising of stock. Mr. Wagy, is a candidate for supervisor of the second district.

Mrs. J. R. Anderson and daughter Virginia arrived home on Sunday after having spent the summer in Berkeley, Cal. Mrs. Anderson was also accompanied by her sister Mrs. Vina C. Russell who spent the summer with them at Berkeley and who after accompanying them home returned to her home in Merced.

WILL GIVE FOOD ADDRESS

Eldridge, local food officer, that the state food administration will send a speaker here to address the people of the town on food conservation plans for next year. This speaker will appear here September 21. The speaker's name and the place of the meeting have not yet been announced.

COALINGA TO USE ITS NEW SCHOOL

COALINGA, Sept. 14.—Coalinga schools both high and grammar will open on Monday for the coming term. The teachers have nearly all arrived and every thing is in readiness for the opening with indications that the enrolement this year will be larger than last. The new Intermediate school is not quite finished, but will be used anyway owing to the need of the room for the large enrolement. The new Intermediate school which is being built at a cost of around $100,000 is quite an addition to the city, it consists of three separate buildings, connected by arcades. The larger building is to be used for class rooms, one for manual training while the third will be used for physical training, containing a large swimming tank.

Mrs. A. H. Good, jr, and children have returned from Seabright where they enjoyed the summer vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Williams returned Wednesday from San Francisco and other points in the north.

Mrs. McCumber and daughter, Miss Georgie left the first of the week, for Los Angeles. Miss McCumber will enter a boarding school in San Fernando.

Mrs. Lyda Bennett is visiting with friends in San Francisco for a few days.

Miss Pearl Watkins has returned from her vacation and is ready to resume her duties with the faculty of the Coalinga Union High School.

OFFICIAL VISITS RED CROSS BRANCH

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 14.—W. H. Allen, field representative of the Red Cross headquarters in San Francisco, was a visitor here yesterday in connection with a state-wide tour being made by field men to consult with committee chairmen.

Mr. Allen said that through these series of conferences the district officials hope to secure ideas which can be put into effect to still further increase the efficiency of the work.

Porterville chapter of the Red Cross has been delayed in finishing the September quota of garments because of the failure of San Francisco officials to forward the necessary materials. It is now doubtful whether the September demand for work can be met.

POSTOFFICE WILL SOON BE ADVANCED

VISALIA, Sept. 14.—The Visalia postoffice will become a first-class office on January 1, 1919, according to Postmaster R. J. Bugby. The steady increase in business through the past several years has sent the business register of the office ahead so rapidly that the first-class office has come a year ahead of the anticipated time two years ago. With the advance in the postoffice comes an advance in salaries and pay for employes.

OIL MAN IS NAMED CAPTAIN

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—Ralph W. Wardell, formerly with the Western Water company near Taft, and well known in local oil and engineering circles, has been appointed a captain in the engineering branch of the United States army and ordered to report at Camp Humphries, in Virginia. Mrs. Wardwell and the children will make their home in Bakersfield.

REGISTRATION WAS LIGHT.

TIPTON, Sept. 14.—Tipton experienced a surprise when Thursday's registration revealed the fact taht only 105 men were to be found within the 18-46 draft ages. Registrar J. A. Atkinson and his two assistants, Constable N. H. Harris and Rus Graham, had made provision for a much larger registration, and were genuinely surprised at the net results. Of course, this number does not include the 26 representatives of Tipton already in the camps and trenches.

Mrs. Nina Woods of Visalia spent Thursday and Friday in Tipton as the guest of her sister, Miss Margaret Newman.

Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Hull and son Forest arrived home Thursday from a month's vacation spent in the southern Oregon mountains.

ATTACK FEDERAL PUBLICITY SYSTEM

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Waste of print paper by the government was charged by Representative Walsh of Massachusetts, Republican, in discussing the war revenue bill today. Citing orders to publishers to curtail publications and the numerous government publications and press agents, Mr. Walsh added:

"The newspapers of America are patriotic and they ought not to be made victims, while wastefulness and extravagance are given free hand in governmental boards and departments.

"Taxpayers ought not to be levied upon in war time to pay for ink, paper, brains and services of would-be Horace Greely's and Jack London's, to splatter ideas about news, while real news is published in the daily press."

"Taxing children's toys and candy as well as women's hats and stockings," he said, "in order to maintain some of these requirements is indefensible."

Home Complexion Peeler Works Wonders

To keep the face, neck, arms and hands truly beautiful and youthful in appearance, the treatment which seems most sensible is one which will actually remove the skin itself immediately it begins to age, fade, coarsen or discolor. The only known treatment which will do this, aside from a painful, expensive surgical operation, is the application of ordinary mercolized wax, which is as harmless as it is effective.

The wax is put on at night, just as you apply cold cream, and washed off in the morning. It absorbs the dead and half-dead surface skin in all its invisible tiny particles, a little each day, no discomfort being experienced. With the disappearance of the old cuticle, the newer, healthier skin underneath gradually appears, fields beautiful with the flush of youth.

The mercolized wax, which you can get at any drug store in original packages, is indeed a veritable wonder-worker.

Give your wife some of our Good Furniture.

© CAD

Dear Mary—

Isn't it funny that some men will give their wives all the pretty clothes they want but when it comes to things to furnish the home they "tighten right up?"

No, it isn't strange either. Such men are vain, selfish and thoughtless. Why I've often seen a man spend as much on one theater party—tickets, autos and supper—as it would cost to nicely furnish a whole room. And his wife needed the furniture too. Theater parties or O. K., but I think furniture comes first.

As ever—HELEN.

P. S.: I hope men will become better and let their wives have all they need of the good furniture they keep at

Wright Law for Irrigationists

By John Fairweather

With all that has been written and meetings held in Fresno on the Irrigation District question, it is a solemn fact there are very many water users yet that do not really comprehend the actual conditions as they exist today under the present contract with the Fresno Canal and land company.

We wish in as compact a matter as possible to set forth the real conditions as we see them.

First: There are only two more irrigating seasons under that contract. After that no man living can tell what will take place after that time, no one can tell with certainty who will own the water and rights on Kings River. It may require our supreme court to tell, yet here are the actual conditions.

The Canal Company is thoroughly organized with the best legal talent always hired ready for any emergency on the other side.

The water users probably 6,000 or more whilst users unorganized with nearly as many opinions as their are members.

We all know law suits are at best expensive luxuries; and often at the end neither side much better off than at the beginning, yet often left with some bitter feeling that does no good to any one or the community in which the cause was held.

Now to avoid any trouble any law suits any loss of time or worry, is it not best for all concerned especially the water users to co-operate, join as one man and organize themselves into an Irrigation District under the good old true and tried law known as the Wright Law?

Under this law the water users rule themselves they spend what money they vote to spend. They elect their own officers and no power or corporation can dictate to them.

This law is now in operation in about 25 districts in this state, notably the alta at Reedley and Dinuba, Modesto, Turlock and 20 other districts. The United States government approves of this law; if the people here under the Fresno Canal System will get together they can be organized before their contract expires. They have time now to organize, get fully prepared to meet any and every emergency that may arise. When organized, they are ready to do business. They can buy out the canal and all its rights (or fight if they wish) if they can not through their directors agree with the company as to price and payments. They can cal in the Railroad Commission and fix the price which would-be-final.

Under these conditions they could not be jobbed or cheated. They would not vote any bonds on the district until they knew the actual price to be paid for the canals and all its appertanances. What is fairer? What is more safe? and nothing is more sure for prosperity in this comunity than for the water users to own and control their own system.

Every acre of land under it would be in a sure and safe position as to water for all time.

And further until this is done, this section can not do anything or take any part in getting more water through the Pine Flat Proposition; this is a fact.

To this end it is proposed for the citizens of every school district to meet in their schools and elect not less than two delegates, two alternates from every school district and where there are more than two teachers the schools elect as many delegates as teachers, but no school to elect more than five delegates. These delegates to meet in Fresno at a future date to discuss the formation of a district, and any and all persons interested can show their interest by their presence. Let this be a meeting when hold of genuine interest; water users wake up, don't delay, get together for in unity lies your strength to protect your interests, but to protect your interetsis you must take a part. Don't leave this important object to others, for what is done now means a revolution in irrigation matters here in our vicinity that will be lasting and prove the greatest benefit for all time for those here now and those that follow us.

"If we go to sleep at the switch" on this matter no one can tell the result. It is too busy a time just now to set the time for any meetng, but we plead of you land owners and water users to get together and discuss this question in your own districts.

It is your business and it is important. "Eternal vigilance is yet the price of Liberty."

There is no money in sight at present to do any work on this great interest, there will have to be money raised, there is a great work to be done it will take time and patience, but it must be done and done well; let me suggest before meeting, to elect delegates two or three schools in close together, hold a meeting for the discussion of this object, we feel sure if this is done when the meeting in Fresno is held the delegates will deride to organize themselves into a district to own and concrol their own system. The folowing school districts are in this proposed irrigation district.

American Colony, Barstow, Biola, Bullard, Easterby, Empire, Clovis, Calwa, Dakota, Dunkard, Fairview, Fresno Colony, Grey Colony, Granville, Gill, Garfield, Houghton, Jefferson, Kerman, Kearney, Kutner Colony, Lorinda, Lucas, Lincoln, Lone Star, Lindsay, Madison, Malaga, Nees Colony, Orange Center, Oleander, Poppy Colony, Perrin Colony, Pomona, Round Mountain, Roosevelt, Roeding, Tiedman, Temperance Colony, Teague, Scandinacian, Washington Colony, Wolters, West Park and Vineland.

"John," exclaimed the nervous woman, "I believe there is a burglar in the house." "I haven't time to fool with small fry," was the sleepy response. "I've spent the entire day fighting regular profiteers."—Washington Star.

No. 421, dated June 9, 1914, concerning the immediate mobilization of all industrial enterprises in Germany, and;

2—Circular No. 93, dated November 28, 1914, of the general staff of the high sea fleet, concerning the sending into enemy countries of special agents for the destruction of war supplies and materials.

The above noted circulars were given under signed receipt into the secret service department of the German staff in Petrograd.

Authorized by the Council of People's Commissars,

N. E. Alkind. E. Pollvanoff.

(Illegible but may be Mekhanschi).

A. Joffe.

The circulars No. 421 and No. 93 mentioned in this protocol and also one copy of this protocol were received on the 3rd of November, 1917, by the secret service department of the German general staff in Petrograd. HENRICH,

Adjutant.

Note.—The circulars inclosed are in German and are as follows:

(1 G. S. General Staff Central Abtheilung, Section M, No. (blank), Berlin, Circular of June 9, 1914.

To Bezirks, Commandanten:

Within twenty-four hours of the receipt of this circular you are to inform all industrial concerns by wire that the documents with industrial mobilization plans and with registration forms be opened, such as are referred to in the circular of the commissary of Count Von Walderze and Cappivi, of June 27, 1887.

No. 121, mobilization section.

Circular of November 28, 1914.

To Marineagenturen and Flottenvereinen:

You are ordered to mobilize immediately all destruction agents and observers in those commercial and military ports in Canada and America where munitions are being loaded on ships going to Russia, France and England, where there are storehouses of such munitions, and where fighting units are stationed. It is necessary to hire through third parties who stand in no relation to the official representatives of Germany, agents for arranging explosions on ships bound for enemy countries, and for arranging delays, embroilments, and difficulties during the loading, dispatching and unloading of ships. For this purpose we are especially recommending to your attention loader's gangs, among whom there are many anarchists and escaped criminals, and that you get in touch with German and neutral shipping offices as a means of observing agents of enemy countries who are receiving and shipping the munitions.

Money required for the hiring and bribing of persons necessary for the designated purpose will be placed at your disposal at your request.

KOENIG.

NOTE—Both the circulars bear the penciled notation that the German secret service bureau at Petrograd has received them, signed Agaafer, the cipher signature of Major Luberts, head of the bureau, as will be shown in document No. 5. The German intent here was to remove from the records of the old Russian government the evidence first, that Germany was beginning in June, 1914, its active preparations for the war that surprised the world in August, 1914, and second, to remove the evidence of its responsibility for incendiarism and explosions in the United States, a country with which Germany was then at peace. The result was to give new evidence of the truth of the charges.

Have original of protocol and have the printed circulars.

Document No. 4.

To the Commissar of Foreign Affairs:

The section has received exact information that the leaders of the Socialist party now ruling in Russia, through Messrs. Fuersterberg and Radek, are in correspondence with Messrs. Scheidemann and Parrus regarding the destruction of the traces of the business relations of the party with the imperial government. We also know that this demand was caused by the demand of leading groups of German Socialists, who saw in the said communications a danger to the cause of world Socialism. By order of the staff, I have the honor to request the submitting of this question to special discussion in the presence of the representative of our staff and Mr. Van Schoenemann.

For the head of the department:

M. Waal.

NOTE—The world penalty, therefore, was apparent to some Germans. Of the personalities names in the letter, Scheidemann, the leader of the German government supporting wing of the Socialist party is the most notable. Once before he has been named in relation to the "business relations" of the Russian Bolsheviki with the imperial government, writing a letter from Berlin August 25, 1917, to a "Mr. Olberg" in which he stated that 150,000 kroners had been placed at Olberg's disposal at Fneistenberg's office through the Nia Bank (Document No. 18). Max Fuerstenberg by this time, January, in Petrograd at Smolny is trying to help Scheidemann in covering up old trails. Radek is a clever Polish Austrian Jew, who came from Switzerland with Lenine. He and Trotsky between them staged the public play acting at Brest Litovsk. Van Schoenemann was the accredited German representative to the Bolshevik foreign office. He is named later in document No. 5. Parvus is a handler of German propaganda money, with headquarters at Copenhagen and is credited with being the directing force behind Joffe.

Have photograph of this letter.

Secret department No. 31.

To the council of peoples commissars:

In accordance with the agreement which took place in Kronstadt in July of the present year between officials of our general staff and leaders of the Russian Revolutionary Army and Democracy, Messrs. Lenine, Trotsky, Raskolnikov and Dybenko, the Russian division of our general staff operating in Finland is ordering to Petrograd officers for the disposal of the information department of the staff. At the head of the Petrograd division will be the following officers, who use the Russian language perfectly and who are acquainted with Russian conditions:

Maj. Lubert, cipher signature Agasfer.

Maj. Von Boelke, cipher signature Schott.

Maj. Bayermeister, cipher signature Ber.

Lieut. Hartwig, cipher signature Henrich.

The espionage department in accordance with the agreement with Messrs. Lenine, Trotsky and Zenoieff, will have the surveillance of the foreign embassies and military missions and on the counter revolutionary movement, and also will perform the espionage and counter-espionage on the internal fronts, for which purpose agents will be asigned to the espionage cities, coincidently it is announced that at the disposal of the government of peoples commissaries are assigned consultants to the ministry of foreign affairs, Mr. Von Schoenmann, and to the ministry of finance, Mr. Von Toll, chief of the Russian division German General Staff O. Rausch, Adjutant U. Wolff. (And below on the same letter)—to the commissariat on foreign affairs. The officers indicated in this paper have been before the military revolutionary committee and have agreed on conditions with Muravieff, Boie, and Danishevlski with regard to their mutual activities. They have all come under the direction of the committee. The consultants will appear as called for. chairman military revolution committee, council of Workers and Soldiers Deputies, A. Joffe, Secretary P. Krushavitch.

Note.—Here is the working compact. If Rausch was then in Berlin he presumably came immediately afterwards to Petrograd. It is more probable that the letter was written in Finland (also Brolin. In some other letetrheads on which Berlin is printed the word is run through with a pen. Stationery was hard to get in Petrograd. Major Luberts became the head of the information or intelligence bureau (Nachrichten Bureau.) Kronstadt was the midsummer headquarters of Lenine. Raskolnikoff has been referred to in connection with the project to sell the Russian fleet to Germany. Dybenko was the commissar of the fleet the naval minister, a driving man and keen witted. Zinovieff is the president of the Petrograd Soviet, during the winter the most powerful of the local bodies of the Russian Soviets. He is Jewish and well educated. Joffe in the letetr of Bolshevik acceptances of the German compact, again stands for what he is, the spokesman, after Lenine, in all matters of supreme importance to Germany.

MOTORING PROBLEMS SOLVED
For Republican Readers

I have a 1916 car. I have had the valves ground, the carbon removed from the cylinder and fan belt tightened, but still the engine overheats. Can you tell me what is wrong? Tell me how to find out if my engine is timed properly. Is heavy oil injurious to the engine? Can you suggest a good way for me to keep the valves and cylinders free from carbon, since I have them clean?

Ans.—Clean cooling system, using one pound of washing soda, dissolving it in hot water and pouring it into the radiator. Run car as usual and drain and flush radiator the next day. Crank engine slowly and see if the valves open and close according to the marks on the fly wheel. Heavy cylinder oil may be used if the engine does not lose power, but gear case oil should not be used in the cylinders. Kerosene into each cylinder once a week will help prevent carbon from forming. Have engine hot and let stand over night. Next day run engine as usual.

I have a Ford touring car now two years old. Have traveled about ten thousand miles, but always kept it in fine order. I notice now when I go down hills a click, as if the piston in the front cylinder is worn. I had it all apart a week ago and went over every bearing, but could find nothing loose. So I put new piston rings in some places, but it has the same click. I got an oversize piston No. 2, but it is too tight to enter from top. Can you tell me where to look for the click and how to remedy same?

Undoubtedly you have overlooked some loose part. Obtain another piston not so large. This should be carefully fitted and then perhaps your trouble will disappear.

I am a young man twenty-eight years of age, with three years' experience driving Ford and Overland trucks. Do all my repair work on Ford. I would like to get in repair shop where I could learn location of trouble on different makes of cars, troubles with ignition and gas, or, one might term it, a chance to learn to be a good, first-class garage man. What kind of shop and what wages do you think I could get?

You have chosen a department of motoring in which there is a great future, as you can work up from repair man to owner-and-so-build up a business. You could not expect much pay at the start, but this is of secondary importance as you are learning. Join the U. S. motor transport service.

I have a 1918 Ford and I cannot stop one of the rear wheels from letting the oil out of the differential. I put in two new felt washers, but did not help it any, so I put in two in place of one on the inside. Can you tell me what to do?

It is just possible that the retaining ring is out of round, so that it does not make a proper pressure, or that there is some defect in the parts around it. Try using heavier gear compound or a light grease.

I have a Model 83 Overland car that has a very bad knock when on a hard pull, as going up hill, and loses considerable power. Retarding spark does but little good. Do you think this is caused by carbon or loose bearings? The carbon was cleaned out last spring, but the bearings were not tightened. Cleaning the carbon helped out for a short time. Compression is good in these cylinders; they will rock back strong, but one cylinder is a little weak. How is it determined when a motor needs oversize pistons, and in this case do you think it is necessary? Please give directions for adjusting a Rayfield carburetor. When painting a car is it correct to rub the car off with emery wood before painting or after painting and then varnishing?

If you remove a spark plug and find it badly carbonated your trouble is probably due to carbon; otherwise it may be piston slap or a loose bearing. If cylinders are worn out of round or scored they will have to be reground, after which oversize pistons will have to be fitted. The cylinders must be measured by means of caliper, an operation requiring a certain amount of skill. Must know more details regarding your carburetor before advising how to adjust; state model, etc. Car must be cleaned and rubbed thoroughly before painted. Each coat should be rubbed down smooth until finish coat is applied. Then varnish.

I am having trouble with my cooling system. At a very short distance the water gets to a boiling point, and I have to fill radiator ever so often, say two to four times every thirty miles, which I am thinking is unnecessary, and if there is some way of remedying it I would appreciate your advice as to how. Engine in first-class condition. I keep carbon removed and oiling is all O. K.

If you are certain the system is not clogged the trouble is probably in the pump. If the top of the radiator is hot but the bottom cold the pump is not working. When the pump is working it draws the hot water down, heating the bottom of the radiator as well as the top. Be sure that ignition is timed right and carburetor adjusted properly.

Kindly answer the following: Is a man with a chauffeur's license more apt to get a good position, or not? It seems to me that a chauffeur who is not registered or has no chauffeur's license should not be allowed to have a position. Is this right or not? Does a chauffeur's certificate prove that the bearer is well capable of operating such machine?

What an employer desires in a chauffeur is experience, which is usually shown by the mileage he has driven. If he cannot claim a large mileage a license will take the place of it to some extent. By all means get a license—it is a certificate of your ability to drive a car.

I have a two-cylinder motorcycle. The engine runs good when it is on the stand, but when I start off it will not pick up speed very fast. I have adjusted the cones to both wheels; so I know that does not hold it back. It is almost impossible to go up a small hill on high gear. Please advise.

Your trouble is probably in the following list: Clogged gasoline line to carburetor, sticky air inlet valve in carburetor, carbon in cylinder head, or perhaps the throttle does not open when the lever is moved.

I have an American motorcycle, 1911 model, run by a V-belt, or what you may call a push and jump on motorcycle. I would like to change it to a four engine clutch if it can be done without great expense. The casings were not run more than three hundred miles. They have not been in use for about three years. Is there any way to soften them, or are they played out?

Such a change would be advisable, but should be made only by a skilled mechanic. Look up the nearest dealer and consult him on the subject. If the casings are hard they are ruined, there being no way to soften them again.

Please give me some information about my Ford runabout. On opening the cut-out one of the explosions is much louder than the others. It runs well enough after warming up, but is apt to miss a little at first. What causes this trouble and how should it be remedied?

The trouble may be a vibrator or coil which does not give as hot a spark as the other. It may be a leak in the inlet manifold, giving some cylinders a defective mixture. Spark gaps may not be set right in plugs. Go over these points carefully.

Helpful Hints.

Do not neglect the top. Go over it occasionally, looking for weak spots or holes. You can get patches from your supply dealer that match the color of the top very closely.

If you find difficulty in replacing cylinders after removing see if the chamfer at bottom of cylinders is properly cleaned. Sometimes dirt collects on it and sometimes the piston wears the part just above it and leaves a slight ridge there. Make a rule of inspecting this part every time you replace cylinders, and much trouble will be avoided.

Go over the fastenings of the starting and lighting system occasionally to make sure that they are not coming loose. Try the bolts and screws to see if they may not be tightened a little more. These may readily be loosened by the shaking of the car, and so they must be watched. If they loosen to the point where the shafts are thrown out of line serious damage may be done to the driving gears.

Go over the wires at the same time to see if they are properly secured, are not chafing where they touch some other part, and that the armor is not sliding up to the terminal so as to make a short circuit. If it comes loose wrap it well with electric tape.

California Oil

PLAN TO PROVIDE GASOLINE SUPPLY

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—The Pacific Petroleum war board has discussed the proposal of supplying crude to all refiners in the west.

Eleven wells on the old Slocum property at Santa Paula are yielding oil of 26 gravity.

A preferential list of industries in California to receive unrestricted use of oil, gasoline and electric power is being prepared by Fuel Administrator Schwabacher under orders from Washington. It is hinted that drastic restrictions will be placed on the consumers of gasoline, especially the pleasure driving public.

The California Oil World scouts the idea of lower prices for gasoline in California, saying the price is lower here than anywhere else on earth.

Between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 gallons of gasoline were conserved by foregoing passenger trips east of the Mississippi last Sunday. President Wilson drove to church behind a team of bays.

BRING IN VALUABLE WELL AT VENTURA

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—A well producing 150 barrels daily of oil valued at $5.35 per barrel o naccount of its having 55 per cent gasoline content, has been brought in by the State Consolidated north of Ventura. The oil is producing through a quarter-inch nipple oil of 58 gravity and nets 35.7 gallons of gasoline per barrel. Besides its output of petroleum, this well is giving off great quantities of gas, estimated at between 500,000 and 1,000,000 cubic feet daily.

The California Oil World says:

"The newly completed well is entirely free from water. This fact is of supreme importance not only as to the great value of this great well itself but also as showing that, contrary to the theories of some pessimists, the oil sand has not been damaged by the work done to date, and that it can be and has been fully protected against any injury."

The well is 2,553 feet deep and was formerly known at the Lloyd crater well No. 2.

PALMER UNION IS DRILLING WELLS

FOWLER, Sept. 14. — In a circular mailed yesterday to the stockholders, John M. Williamson, president of the Palmer Union Oil Company, reports progress with regard to the three new wells which are being drilled.

He says that well No. 6 is down 2,658 feet; well No. 5, 2,250 feet, and well No. 2, 2,800 feet. The indications in all three wells are reported as very good.

Concerning present earnings, Williamson finds this to say:

After paying all expenses, that is to say, all operating and overhead expense, with include both the current and deferred bond coupons, we have over $6,000 a month to be applied on development work, and when these three new wells come in, it will add materially to our earnings, without material increase of our operating expenses.

With reference to the payment of bond interest. We wish to call attention to the fact that the current bond interest amounts to approximately $3,000 per month, but owing to the bond interest being waved, for a period of three years from October 1, 1914, to October 1, 1917, that deferred interest, which amounts to $3,000 per month, commenced to fall due and has been paid off at that rate, since October, 1917.

Were it not for the payment of these deferred coupons, it would leave $3,000 for development work.

SOUTHERN FIELDS ARE VERY ACTIVE

TAFT, Sept. 14.—Big things characterize the work of the oil operators in the southern California field for the second week of September. Every portion of the field is intensely active and news of wells being brought in pretty nearly every section of the country is the week's record.

At Montebello the Standard Oil Company completed three wells on the Baldwin Hills property and increased the daily output of this lease over 1,500 barrels. The big increase comes at a very opportune time and will be of great assistance i nthe maintaining of the southern field's production.

A thousand-barrel well in the Brea field put the Brea Canyon Oil Company on the map. This company's No. 25 came in flowing at the rate of 1,000 barrels a day, and means that there are more wells in the locality just like it if they are drilled deep enough.

Eight new wells started drilling in the field this week and, judging from the speed the completions are being made, it will not be very long before the field will be due for a big production increase.

The abandonment of the Copa De Oro well in the Little Brea anyon is somewhat of a setback for the hopes of extending the Brea field a number of miles northward. However, it seems that the oil is not there and no more money or materials should be used in this uncertain locality until the Kaiser is driven out of Berlin.

Leasing activity in the vicinity of Olinda and Yorba Linda is running now at fever heat. One would have to have a pretty poor piece of property here and not be able to lease for oil land. The Standard and Union oil companies started things going in the eastern and northern ends of the Brea field by drilling a couple of wells, both of which are looking very good.

That the Standard Oil company will open a new field east of Brea on the Framer tract is almost a certainty. Kramer No. 1 is drilling in sandy shale at 2,650 feet, the well is showing lots of gas and other indications for an oil well are very encouraging.

As the Fulon's Graham-Loftus, the Amalgamated's adjacent property, is falling off in production, excess further eastward will bring the old-time activity of six years ago back to the local field.

SHELL COMPANY FINDS NEW SAND

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—The Oil World prints a Ventura dispatch as follows: "At 3,380 feet in its Gosnell well No. 1, the Shell Company has opened a new oil sand—the third to be penetrated in this wonderful field—and the present outlook is for a well far surpassing anything yet seen in this district. The drill has penetrated some 360 feet of oil sand showing every sign of being rich in oil testing about 30 gravity. The water has not yet been shut off. The gas pressure is enormous." During the drilling the crews have frequently been obliged to spend three-fourths of their hours of duty pumping in mud to hold the gas in check. Recently the well broke loose for a brief period and flowed a barrel a minute. Indications are that it will develop into a monster when opened. The drill passed through the two upper sands in which the State Consolidated and General Petroleum wells are flashed and which give off from 52 to 58 gravity. Having planned this well for a thorough test of the potentialities of the field, the company shut off both of these upper sands and went on deeper."

RECEIVER TO SELL OIL.

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—The production of the Pyramid Oil Company, totaling 2,400 barrels monthly, will be sold by the U. S. Receiver Howard M. Payne at San Francisco, on September 25. The sale will be for one year. No premiums can be offered.

ABANDON WILDCAT WELL.

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 14.—The Standard Oil Company has abandoned its deep wildcat well in the Antelope valley, northwest of McKittrick. The hole is down 4,000 feet and no encouraging signs were struck.

ALFALFA ASSOCIATION GAINS BIG ACREAGE IN THE VALLEY

Labor Republican: The alfalfa growers of the San Joaquin Valley are making great headway organizing a unit of the California Alfalfa Growers' Association. This association is trying to put alfalfa producing on a stable basis and to organize one of the largest industries of the state after the manner of the raisin and peach growers, hoping to benefit both producer and consumer. The Alfalfa Growers' Association of California has placed me in charge of the organization work in Fresno and Madera and the west half of Merced county.

A clear statement of the aims and purposes of the association in your columns would be of material assistance to the growers. More than 6,000 acres are already signed in Fresno county alone, and about 12,000 acres in this district, nearly one-half the acreage signed in the entire state. After a conference with Colonel Harris Weinstock, state market director, and I. H. Mulholland, I offer the following as the primary aims of the growers:

1. Placing the business upon a profitable basis, thereby stimulating and increasing production.
2. Developing and consolidating market for the product.
3. Reducing distributing cost between producer and consumer to lowest possible point.
4. Eliminating lost motion in distribution and waste incurred therein.
5. Co-operative effort with other organizations in solving the labor problem.
6. Wholesale purchasing direct from manufacturers of implements and supplies.
7. An ability to secure united action upon all questions affecting the industry.
8. Giving grower a voice in determining the value of his product.
9. Broadening the market for alfalfa.
10. Developing eastern and foreign markets for surplus alfalfa, thus preventing gluts and killing of prices in home markets.
11. Insuring the grower getting the full value of his product in accordance with the law of supply and demand, instead of getting such price less rake-offs to speculative buyers.

To obtain the best results, a farmer must produce that crop to which his land is best adapted, and which will yield the highest returns. Natural conditions make California the greatest alfalfa producing state. The yield per acre is far larger and climatic conditions are most suitable for curing the hay, making a superior product. This state excels in quality and quantity production. At present the market is local. In years of excess production there is no demand for the surplus, and the price falls to $3 per ton, and much of it is actually lost. In years of drought and shortage the price soars to a point where the consumer faces ruin to save his stock. It is obvious that the exact amount of hay to meet local demands cannot be produced each year as no one can foresee whether it will be a wet or dry season. To protect the consumer there must be a surplus every year, and to stimulate the production of that surplus there must be a market developed to consume it at a profit to the grower. That market can be obtained. Upwards of 30,000,000 of people live on the Atlantic coast. The milk consumption is the greatest of any like number of people in the world, and it must be produced upon the spot. There are about 500 large dairies supplying those people with fresh milk, and California alfalfa would be the choicest and best forage those dairymen can obtain. The federal government is now building the largest merchantile marine of any country in the world, and is now making systematic effort to secure tonnage for those ships when the war is over. What can California best produce for export? There was a day when the Port Costa roadstead was filled with ships waiting for cargoes of wheat; that time has passed forever. Our largest exports at present are fruits—mostly perishable products—which will continue to be shipped by rail. Alfalfa can be shipped from interior points to Atlantic Coast ports at a cost of from $7.00 to $10.00 per ton, owing to location. There is an unlimited demand at $30 per ton and over for alfalfa hay, and for alfalfa meal at an even higher price. At $25 per ton and over net to the grower and the assurance that this figure would continue over a term of years, three times the present acreage would be planted. The uncertain conditions which have existed during the past of $3.00 per ton in surplus years, and $37 per ton in years of shortage, like the season just passed, has been demoralizing both to the alfalfa grower and the local consumer—the dairyman and feeder. Primarily the farmer is endeavoring to secure the highest returns his land will yield. With few exceptions he is not in the dairy business, the beef and hog business, or the fruit business because he loves it but from necessity. If he is operating a dairy or feeding stock for market, it is because he hopes to obtain a larger return from his lands in that manner. If he can make more money selling hay direct in place of converting it into a marketing product through a dairy or meat, he will sell direct. That which will yield the highest return from the land is his objective. The dairyman and the feeder are the most interested in this movement as they have the largest investment. They have the same capital invested in land as a man who is producing solely for the market. Their cost of production is just the same and there is the added investment in cows and dairy machinery. In years of hay surplus every alfalfa grower casts about for means of consuming hay, and he buys more dairy cows and more feeders; more farmers are forced into the dairy business with the consequent ever supply of dairy products and falling prices, so that he actually receives a smaller income from his land. In years of shortage cows are slaughtered feeders are not imported, the price of livestock depreciates, and he loses on his investment. Now, with an equalized basic price or his product—alfalfa—the business, dairy and feed, would automatically adjust itself. There would be no mad scramble in years of surplus to buy cows and stock and in years of shortage to sell. The price of dairy products would become stable, as the law of supply and demand would decide which was the most profitable, direct selling of hay or dairying. There would not be a big rush into the dairy business in one term of years and a big selling out the next. There would not be a flooding of the milk market one year and consequent falling prices, and a shortage the next year in which the consuming public suffers from. From the foregoing it must become apparent that the basic price of alfalfa will be that obtained for the exported surplus, and to maintain a stable price, we must always have that surplus.

The foregoing will cover objectives No. 1 and 2. As to No. 3. This might be dilated upon at great length, but suffice to say that wherever cooperative methods have been tried, as in the citrus industry, raisins, prunes, peaches, nuts, beans and rice, it has served both producer and consumer. Those industries have been saved from absolute ruin and the cost to the consumer under normal conditions not materially increased. In the hands of the speculator and commission man the citrus industry was paralyzed with a marketing product of 5000 cars annually. It is now flourishing under cooperative methods, marketing nearly 50,000 cars annually, and bringing into California $40,000,000 a year. The raisin industry has been rescued from a condition where the vines were a detriment in selling the land at $100 per acre, with a crop of 40,000 tons, to a land value of $1000 per acre and last year's crop of 163,000 tons. So of all the others. Alfalfa which will bring into the state a new revenue of $100,000,000 per year, the king of them all, has shrunken in area during the last three years over 50 per cent. Alfalfa fields have been plowed up because it was not profitable to grow it, and planted to beans, beets, and in many instances to wheat and barley. An objection has been raised to exporting alfalfa in that it would deprive our soils of fertility. What of the large and growing number of acres planted to beans, beets and grains? Alfalfa is a soil builder; the other crops mentioned are a heavy drain.

Taking up No. 4, under the present lack of system and inadequate marketing methods there is much loss. Hay is baled in Fresno county and is shipped to Sonoma county. Hay shipments have been frequently known to pass each other going to and from the same locality. There is no uniformity in price even in the same district. One farmer will be selling at $10 per ton and his neighbor a mile away at $12 and another at $14. A clear case of catch as catch can. An application of scientific cooperative methods will end all this.

As to No. 5. The labor situation is a very serious matter. Before we entered into the war it was in a chaotic condition, and now it is very much worse. The problem of farm labor in particular has never been sufficiently considered. With all of the alfalfa growers acting as a unit and conjointly with fruit and other organizations, the situation can be more promptly and efficiently met, with greater satisfaction to both employer and employed. In the citrus industry the great demand for floating labor is during the months from December to May. The alfalfa grower needs it the remainder of the year. It would seem that with the alfalfa growers organized, with a definite system to be followed, that a working plan could be formulated, whereby both the farmer and the laborer would be greatly benefited.

In the matter of wholesale purchasing of farm implements and supplies, this plan has been followed for many years by the California Fruit Growers' Association, whose auxiliary, the Fruit Growers' Supply Company, does a business of $5,000,000 a year and the aggregate saving to the grower runs into large figures. The same plans can be equally worked out for the benefit of the farmer.

Taking up the last clause, the fable of the bundle of twigs applies. The individual may be broken whereas the united determination of a body of men could not be bent. Take organized labor as an example: the demand of 1000 men expressed through one representative is promptly given a hearing; a farmer, working alone in keen competition in the labor market with his next door neighbor, is in common parlance "up against it." And he is "up against it proper," and only a strong organization of farmers with all the influence which a unity of purpose alone can give, will save the situation.

WAR GARDEN TALKS FERTILIZATION

By Richard Schmidt,
Supervisor of Vocational Agriculture and War Gardens

To get best results from a war garden, it is necessary that the soil be fertilized. Though the soils of Fresno are comparatively rich so far as trees and vines go, it lacks in humus or decayed vegetable matter when it comes to using it for the growing of vegetables.

A good application of well rotted stable manure is best, part of which may be worked up in the soil and part scattered over the top after the seed has been sown. This will act as a mulch and conserve the moisture and if weeds do not grow hoeing will be unnecessary. Chicken droppings may be used, but more sparingly than stable manure, as they are likely to burn when they come in contact with the roots of the plants. These fertilizers are often difficult to obtain. In their absence lawn clippings that have been allowed to dry or decay somewhat (green Bermuda grass may grow when put into the soil) may be used as a fertilizer and mulch. Even kitchen garbage when buried in the soil and allowed to decay will cause a wonderful difference in the growth of the plants.

A backyard war garden measuring 18x20 feet, the soil having been fertilized last year with chicken droppings and garbage, and which was not touched with the hoe but mulched with lawn clippings, produced the following astonishing results to date:

Vegetables Planted March 15.

Tomatoes, 8 plants, yield to date 181 pounds; average value, $8.50.

Egg plant, 4 plants, yield to date, 24 pounds, 10 ounces; average value $1.25.

Beans, 2 rows 14 feet long, yield to date, 27 pounds, 11 ounces; average value, $1.85.

Beans planted June 23, yield to date, 20 pounds; average value, $1.40.

Total, $16.45.

Expenses.

Water, per month, 50 cents extra for 6 months, $3.00; seeds and plants, $1.20; total, $4.80.

300 SOLDIERS TO TRAIN AT NORMAL
Course to Be Given Soldiers in Radio Electricity at Institution

Beginning on October 1, Fresno State Normal school will be used as a military training school for training 300 army men in radio electricity, according to an agreement come to with the government and the board of managers of the Normal school. A conference was held between M. B. Harris, representing the board of managers of the school, and the government officials, and the formal contract drawn up was confirmed by the board.

The contract, it was stated, provides for the furnishing of necessary equipment, and aiding in the supply of an adequate teaching staff. The 300 men will consist of army drafted men who have had some experience in electrical work.

President C. L. McLane stated that the men would come from all parts of the United States, and as they represent many families who will visit them while here, he thought it would mean a considerable business advantage to Fresno. It was reported, he said, that Oakland Polytechnic, which is a military training school, had men registered from all parts of the United States.

In order to handle this number of men, President McLane said, a special faculty will have to be created to do this work exclusively. He said that it was possible that the science teachers in their regular work would be able to give some assistance.

It was at first suggested that 200 men would be in training at the school, but with the additional 100 provision for their accommodation will be necessary. For this purpose, President McLane said, an extra floor is to be put in the gymnasium, thus making it a two-story building instead of a one-story building. The advantage of this plan, he pointed out, was that the gymnasium is already equipped with the necessary heating and plumbing. In most other places, he said, it had been found necessary to build temporary quarters, but with the present fittings the gymnasium will be turned into a double storied dormitory.

Note.—The indorsements are "copy handed to chairman Council Workmen and Soldiers Deputies N 856." "Deliver to Comrade Zinovieff and to Secret Department." Signature ineligible. January 12, Russian calendar, fell in the early part of the week of the all Russian Soviet convention in Petrograd the week after the forcible dissolution of the Constituent Assembly. The election came at the end of the week and was a perfunctory re-election of practically the whole former executive committee of Commissars. Lacking the exact list, I nevertheless can state tat the present executive committee was drafted from this group. The name there surprising to me is that of Martov, the leader of the Menshiviks, though it is my recollection that his party of opposition was allowed representation.

Martov is an able writer, was associated with Trostky in his Paris journalistic venture, but was supposed to have split with him in Russia. The evidence that he is still agreeable to Germany is pertinent. Madame Kolontl, the only woman on this list, was the Commissar of Public Welfare. She was sent abroad for foreign propaganda in February, but did not get beyond Scandinavia and later returned to Russia. Kamenoff, who went out of Russia with Kollontai, also sought to repatriate was arrested by the Finnish White Guards, and the Germans on the Aland Islands, and his release was the subject of negotiations. He is Trotsky's brother-in-law. Sverdlov was temporary chairman of the all-Russian Soviet. Lunacharski is comissar of education.

Steklov is editor of the official paper Isvestia. Voldarsky, who has lived in the United States, was in close confidence with Lenine. He was killed in Moscow the last week in June. Akasfer, who delivered the order in behalf of Rausch, is Major Luberts. Have photograph of letter.

You'll say the same.

And while you admire its mechanical superiorities, your wife will proclaim it the handsomest car she ever saw. She'll admire the roominess, the deep upholstery, the little conveniences.

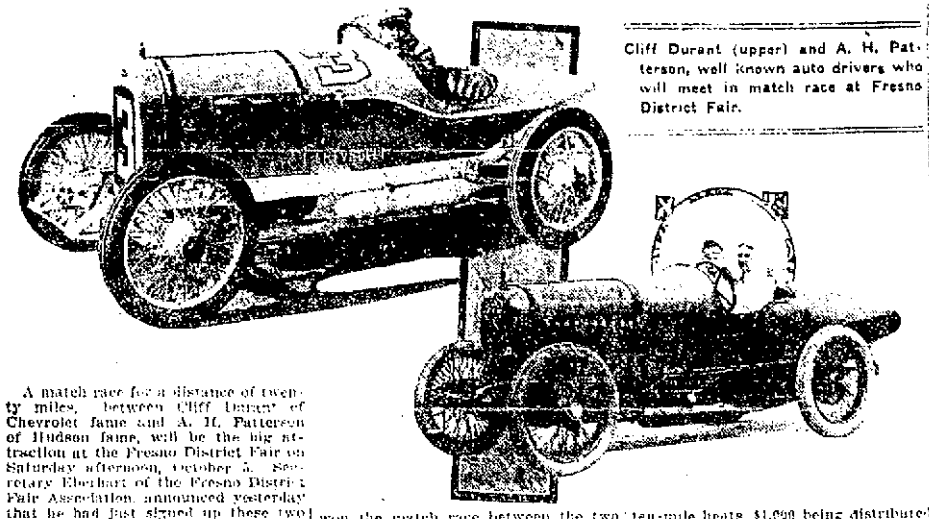
NEWS of the SPORT WORLD

DURANT TO MEET PATTERSON

Match Race of Twenty Miles Arranged for Fair



Cliff Durant (upper) and A. H. Patterson, well known auto drivers who will meet in match race at Fresno District Fair.

A match race for a distance of twenty miles, between Cliff Durant of Chevrolet fame and A. H. Patterson of Hudson fame, will be the big attraction at the Fresno District Fair on Saturday afternoon, October 5. Secretary Eberhart of the Fresno District Fair Association announced yesterday that he had just signed up these two racing drivers for this event. The purse is $1,000, the winner of the race taking all.

These drivers have been matched against each other on a number of coast tracks this year and there is a great deal of rivalry between them. In the last race meet, in which the two appeared, at Tacoma, Durant made a clean-up of everything in sight.

Patterson raced on the Fresno track last year against Earl Cooper, Cooper won the match race between the two but in a free for all, Patterson took the big share of first money.

Eddie Pullen is another well known racing driver who will be seen in the Fresno fair auto races. He will be entered in the second event in which a purse of $3,000 is to be divided. Patterson and Durant are also entered in this event.

Pullen will drive the car with which Eddie O'Donnell won the Raisin Day race in Fresno in 1916.

This race will be divided into three ten-mile heats, $1,000 being distributed to the winners in each heat.

R. Edgren COLUMN

By ROBERT EDGREN.

Jack Dempsey promises to become the heaviest hitter in all the long list of heavyweight champions. In fact, his recent performances seem to indicate that he has the greatest knockout punch ever used by any fighter.

Some other champions have had one knockout punch, but Dempsey uses either hand for body or head, and his various blows all have a sleep-producing quality.

A man who has won nine fights in a row with one-round knockouts, and four in succession in times varying from eighteen seconds to a minute and ten seconds, must be an extraordinary hitter. One of the victims was Fulton, and he was knocked out in the shortest time on record for a first-class heavyweight fight, just eighteen and three-fifths seconds. "Porky" Flynn, noted for his skill in "playing the limit," was knocked out in sixty seconds.

Not a single one of the old-time champions ever polished his rivals off as quickly as Dempsey does. Even John L. Sullivan never showed such a "finish." And John had only one great blow—a terrific right-hand swing to the jaw. Many fighters of less class than Fulton's managed to stay a long time with John L. He didn't land any one-minute knockouts, except in the case of a few who knowns who met him when he was traveling around the country meeting all comers.

Corbett was a clever fighter for a very short time—when he beat Sullivan and when he beat Mitchel. After that he quickly lost his fighting quality. Even at his best he never had anything like Dempsey's punishing power.

Bob Fitzsimmons was Dempsey's only rival as a one-round finisher. And Fitz didn't win many fights in the first round. He was a terrific puncher, but he landed the knockout wallop when he had his men well measured, and usually after several rounds of hard fighting. Bob was most dangerous when he was being beaten. Ruhlin had him nearly out when he hooked one into Ruhlin's body and ended the fight. That was an awful blow. Ruhlin told me that for two weeks afterward he thought he was going to die. Sharkey and Ruhlin both declared they never would fight "old Fitz" again, after sampling his knockout punch. Jeffries said that he wouldn't have taken the hammering Fitzsimmons gave him in their second fight for a hundred thousand dollars. Fitzsimmons was unrivalled as a puncher until this Dempsey lad appeared.

Jeffries Had a Wonderful Jab

Jeffries had a great "kick." Tommy Ryan told me a few years ago that he considered Jeff's left jab, used from a crouching position that gave him a perfect defense, the best blow ever used by any fighter in the ring.

"I taught him that," said Ryan. "I went into his training quarters and made him stand for being beaten up every day for two weeks, just teaching him to keep that left out and hold his jaw under cover of his shoulder. When I let him begin to fight he knocked my head off. When he fought Fitzsimmons for the championship he let Fitz rush in and lifted him clean off his feet with that jab, so that Fitz struck the floor on the back of his neck. It was the hardest jab any man ever used. Jeff could hit like a kicking mule with his right, too. He broke three of Sharkey's ribs with that punch."

Jack Johnson seldom showed great punching power. He was a very cautious fighter. And he never cut loose with everything he had, except once. That was when little Stanley Ketchel knocked Johnson down. Johnson was dazed. He took nine seconds and rose to meet Ketchel coming with a furious rush to finish his work. Steadying himself, Johnson lashed out with a right-hander that hit Ketchel full on the mouth, knocked out all of his front teeth and rendered him unconscious for several minutes.

Jess Willard was a great puncher when aroused, but he wasn't a Dempsey by any means. Dempsey naturally knocks out the man in front of him, whether hard pressed or not. Willard had to be well stung before he could arouse himself enough to put all of his great strength into a blow. He did it with Soldier Kearns. The Soldier drove a hard right into Willard's body, and Willard flared up and threw his whole weight behind a right counter that caught Kearns on the jaw and flattened him for a full ten-second count.

At Havana Willard took his time in beating Johnson. He fought twenty-six very careful rounds before he was convinced that Johnson was too firm-eyed to be dangerous. Then he went after the black champion and hit him a hard blow in the body, and a half minute later followed with a heavy right-hander on the jaw that ended the fight.

Dempsey Best "K. O. Artist" of Them All

Judging by the results of Dempsey's recent encounters I am inclined to think that he would have finished Johnson in much less time.

Dempsey is a better hard hitter than John L. Sullivan was, because John L. had only a crushing right swing, while Dempsey uses left or right to body or head with equal effect.

He is at least a quicker finisher than Fitzsimmons, although, of course, not yet proved to be Fitzsimmons' equal as a fighter.

He is a much quicker finisher than Jeffries, many of whose fights went twenty rounds or more.

He is a harder hitter than Johnson or Willard, by a long margin.

The only man who had the Dempsey knack of putting over a crushing punch was Sam Langford when Sam was at his best. And even Sam has a number of long fights on his record list—fights that Dempsey might have cut to a round or two.

The sporting world is going to watch Dempsey in all of his coming ring battles, to see if he won't turn out to be the king of all knockout artist. After all, the knockout is the supreme test in the battles of the ring. The man who can win decisively is the man who gathers fame and a following.

DUNBOYNE WINS $30,000 FUTURITY CLASSIC AT BELMONT

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Running straight and true from the rise of the barrier to the finish, P. A. Clark's chestnut colt, Dunboyne, by Celt-Workmand, won the $30,000 futurity classic for 2-year-olds, over the six furlong straightaway course at Belmont Park today from a field of fifteen starters. Sir Barton, owned by Commodore J. E. K. L. Ross of Canada, was second and the Brighton stable's Purchase, a well-backed second choice, finished third. The winner's time was 1:12 4-5.

Dunboyne, a well supported favorite in the betting, ran away to a [illegible] Jockey Schuttinger got him under control for the start. Although carrying the heavy impost of 127 pounds, Dunboyne had plenty of reserve speed, once the barrier was sprung, and he dominated the running throughout, coming away easily in the final eighth, to win by two lengths.

The Trump, Sir Barton and Pigeon Wing were chasing the leader in the early part of the race, while Thunderstorm ran forwardely all the way, but Pigeon Wing stopped badly in the last furlong.

The sensation of the race was the wonderful performance of Purchase, who might have been returned the winner had he run straight. When the barrier flew up, Purchase propped and then started at an oblique angle toward the inner rail, from where he shot to the outside fence. Before Jockey Lyke could straighten him, Purchase was fully eight lengths behind the field in the first quarter and then he began to run so fast that he proved he was by far the speediest horse in the race. He was running over the other horses in the final eighth and was beaten only a half length for second money by the outsider, Sir Barton.

Morinon, after a grand race, finished fourth, with The Trump fifth and the Wilson pair, Thunderstorm and Hannibal, a head apart, next. Grimalkin was eighth and the added starter, Sea Way, ninth, followed home by Star Hampton, Pigeon Wing, Efficient, Delaware, Farmingdale and Scoots, in order named.

The winner's share of the stake was $23,360.

Immediately after the race the Brighton stable challenged the winner to a match race with Purchase at the same weights and distance and it is likely that the two may meet at the Aqueduct track in a special event next Saturday.

INTENSIVE ATHLETIC TRAINING IS BARRED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Athletic sports as formerly pursued, involving extended trips and specialized training, will not be permitted at colleges and other institutions having war students training corps, Colonel R. J. Ross, chairman of the war department committee on education and special training, has advised presidents of such institutions in a letter made public here today.

It will be the policy of the committee, however, to strongly encourage athletic sports within each institution and with neighboring institutions, Colonel Ross said, in cases in which the distances are so short as to necessitate no interruption of the weekly schedule of academic and military training.

"Athletic sport as formerly pursued, involving extended trips and specialized training are inconsistent with the soldiers' program of drill and study," said the letter. "Athletic directors and professors of physical education who are already in the employ of the students' army training corps institutions can be used in connection with intramural sports, and for the assistance of the officers in charge of military physical training.

"The commanding officer at each institution will be in charge of the physical condition and training of men under his command, and will be reported for coordinating the military training, routine and discipline with athletic sports."

After receipt of this letter the presidents of several colleges wrote to senators protesting that the plan would prevent intercollegiate football this season and until the end of the war, with a consequent financial loss to the schools, which already had arranged schedules of games and made contracts for playing them.

In addition to preventing intercollegiate football the ruling also may make it impossible for institutions to participate in intercollegiate and other track meets, intercollegiate baseball and other sports.

MARICOPA

A meeting of the directors of the Maricopa club was held on Wednesday evening for the purpose of deciding the club's future. The club as usual has been closed during the warm weather period for the past summer and now that cooler weather is coming the directors decided to meet and see if it was possible to reopen the club for the fall and winter social season. The majority of directors present were of the opinion that the club would not be a financial success nor could it even be made self sustaining during the coming year on account of the fact that more than half of the younger and more active members of the organization are now in the country's service, therefore it was decided to keep the club closed and to settle up the club's affairs and sell off the furniture and furnishings. The Maricopa club has been one of the big social organizations of the west side oil fields for the past four years and its membership covered most of the men prominently connected with the business and oil affairs of the Midway Sunset field. The many parties and dances given in the past made the club one of the most popular places in the oilfields. The organization which started the club was formed of the prominent men engaged in the oil development and business life of the west side. The club rooms were luxuriously furnished and one of the finest ball rooms in the county was equipped and maintained. Last June the club's buffet was closed and since that time the members agreed not to reopen it.

H. S. Nisbet, well known west sider and former assistant postmaster at Maricopa left on Thursday for his old home in Georgia to spend an extended vacation with his parents and relatives. Mr. Nisbet recently received word from his home of the poor health of his father and hastened his trip to arrive home at an early date. For the past six months he has been employed as bookkeeper for the manager of the Receivers office in charge of the oil lands in the withdrawn area.

William H. Coons, Mrs. Coons and their daughter Louisa Dell arrived home on Tuesday from Los Angeles and the southern beaches where Mrs. Coons and the baby spent the warm weather period. Mr. Coons left Maricopa last week to spend a few days with them before they returned home for the balance of the year.

JEWS OF AMERICA SOLIDLY FOR WAR

Eastsiders, Formerly Reluctant, Now Eager to Support Government.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Despite their native abhorrence of war and militarism, the Jews of the United States have become a unit for the war against Germany. The reasons for this attitude have been examined by a writer in the American Weekly Jewish News, who concludes, after discussion, that not only does the heart of the East Side of New York, the largest Jewish colony of the world, beat with America, but that that particular section has actually become "one of the strongholds of unadulterated Americanism."

The reason for this is the work of education which has been carried on among Jews since the war came to America. It was brought home to the people of the East Side that the United States is not fighting for conquest but for freedom. Fighting for freedom is a thing that the Jew understands. President Wilson's speeches have been widely printed and distributed by the Jewish newspapers. Even the socialist papers admitted that President Wilson is utterly sincere and that his conditions of peace are almost exactly the conditions that the socialists of the world demand; while the editor of one anarchist paper actually bought Liberty Bonds. The enthusiasm and activities of the Jewish population of the East Side of New York for the war are described by the writer in part as follows:

"Since the Third Liberty Loan a spirit of patriotism and devotion to the United States has swept across the district and has enveloped everyone; lines of demarcation between classes have been obliterated by all-embracing fervor. In the Third Liberty Loan, in the Red Cross campaign, in the War Savings and Thrift Stamp drives, in the demonstrations and patriotic pageantry of the Fourth of July, the Jews of the East Side have more than done their duty. Jewish participation in any of the aforementioned activities will serve to illustrate the new spirit of the East Side; but nothing serves this purpose better than the Third Liberty Loan.

"That the East Side has changed heart is encouraging because it shows that one by one the elements of America's polyglot of races are lining up solidly behind the nation. It also shows the final crystallization of the conviction that Germany is the world's common foe. And this unity of spirit is unsusceptible of being crushed under the weight of the Prussian military machine.

Remarkable Meeting Held

"During one of the meetings arranged at the time of the Third loan by the Liberty Loan Committee of the East Side, five thousand persons filled every available nook of the large Cooper Union auditorium, and thousands of others were turned away by the police reserves disgruntled because they missed an opportunity of manifesting their love for their adopted country. Upon the speakers' platform sat former irreconcilable enemies, men who bolster up the capitalistic system, and men who champion the cause of a proletarian democracy; republican judges and democratic judges; patriarch Jews who are scrupulous in the observance of Jewish ritual in accordance with the dictates of orthodoxy and anorchism who flout all religious affiliations; persons representing all strata of life and recruited from the entire gamut of political, social and religious Jewry. It was a glorious testimonial of the unity of the East Side in the present crisis and cogent proof of the grim determination to support all the needs of the government.

"The United Hebrew Trades of New York, the central workingmen's organization of lower Manhattan, though it had opposed the first and second loans, urged the members unions to subscribe loyally to the third. Innumerable examples can be adduced to show the zealousness with which the Jewish proletariat responded to the pleas of the government. The Seventh Precinct of New York, the inhabitants of which are nearly all Russian Jews, is perhaps the most radical area in the United States. It has a Socialist Assemblyman and a Socialist Alderman and is part of a Congressional district represented by a Socialist. The only Socialist judge in New York comes from that quarter. It is a hotbed of radical ideas where the red flag was seen much fore often than the American and where American participation in the war was once bitterly resented. In that district alone the change was remarkable. There were only four hundred and seventy-six subscribers to the First Liberty Loan and these contributed only $62,500. For the Third Liberty Loan 4,000 persons invested savings totalling $350,000.

"In the last few days of the Liberty Loan campaign it became more evident than ever that dynamic forces were stirring East Side Jewry. Thousands of Jews from the uncouth and bearded synagogue Jew, to his polished debonair grandson; from the wrinkled and child-harassed Jewish matron to the besmeared and beowered Ghetto girl, Jews of all classes and parties besieged the banks of Brownsville, Harlem Williamsburg and Lower Manhattan — districts which now comprise the Greater East Side—and waited patiently on the stairs in front of the banks for hours until the government would take their money. Even an editor of the anarchistic Frele Abeiter Stimme came to the president of a Delancey street bank and asked for three Liberty bonds. And according to latest figures there are 80,000 Jews in the American army."

A PARALLEL.

Trained animals; it marvelous show it was
The tigers and the leopards—household pets;
The King of beasts (I thought it pitiful)—
A tinsel crown he wore, quite to one side;
So, charioteered around the sawdust field,
A poor old Lear, his kingdom long forgot!
Each beast, obedient, kept his pedestal,
Till summoned by the master to perform;
The master, I remember, bore a Teuton name.

Yet, not quite all the beasts were at his bid;
One wandered at his will—the Polar Bear!
White, beautiful, he shuffled here or there,
Free, free, yet none the happier for that
(Or so I thought). He swung his liken head,
Or laid it softly gain'st the pedestals
Where crouched or stood the others (docile beasts),
And out his pink and panting tongue he thrust,
Not liking well the overheated air.
Hidocile he? The audience never knew;
Yet not that show's least favorite was The Bear.

A reminiscence—and—foreshadowing!
I would not strain analogy too far,
Between that trivial and a greater stage.
Yet her it holds: The lookers on—observe!
Are tender toward this untaught, hapless one—
This beautiful, intractable, mild Bear!
And studious, too, to rouse him from his dream
Of Peace where Peace I snot, nor yet can be,
Peace?—'tis ensanguined by his feudal foe,
Who wastes his wide estate, his wealth devours!
Oh, who shal rescue, who shal teach The Bear?
—Edith M. Thomas in New York Sun.

One Avery Sells Another

PROOF of Avery Tractor success is shown by the way Avery Tractor sales grow in the same community. When one ranchman gets an Avery Tractor, his neighbors watch its work closely. It is not long before another Avery arrives and then another, for his neighbors see that Avery Tractors stand up under the work.

Likewise, when an Avery gets into a family, other members of the same family soon become Avery owners. Brothers, cousins, fathers and sons, uncles and nephews are buying Averys. We have many records of where two, three and four brothers in the same family have bought Avery Tractors. The fact that neighbors, friends and relatives buy Avery Tractors after they have watched carefully the work of the first Avery Tractor in their community or family, is the very best proof that Avery Tractors are a success.

Power for Every Need

You can get an Avery Tractor to exactly fit your size ranch. Avery Tractors are built in six sizes—a size for every size ranch. With an Avery Motor Cultivator you can also cultivate your row crops with motor power. You can also get a size Avery "Grain-Saving" Separator and Avery Plow for any size Avery Tractor. For any kind of field work, belt work or road work, there is a successful and profitable Avery Motor Power Machine.

Built by Machinery Specialists

The five sizes of Avery Tractors, from 8-16 to 40-80 H. P., are all of the same design. They have low speed motors, renewable inner cylinder walls, adjustable crankshaft boxes, gasifiers that turn kerosene or distillate into gas and burn it all, and many other original and exclusive features.

Avery Tractors are built entirely in our own big factories and every part of an Avery Tractor is built especially for tractor work and only for the Avery Tractor. Avery Company are builders—not assemblers.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

Increasing Rye Acreage

In the early days of farming in Fresno county, wheat was the great crop. Year after year enormous crops of wheat were raised. Continuous cropping to wheat rapidly reduced the yield, and the more vigorous barley was substituted for wheat. Much of the ground is now barley sick and will not produce even a good crop of barley without summer fallowing. The obvious step to keep up the war cereal is the sowing of rye.

Rye Not a Substitute

In our big war program food that can be used for bread is essential. Hoover says we are safe this year, but there will be an increased demand next year and there may be, probably will be, on account of drouth, plant disease, shortage of fertilizers and adverse labor conditions, a decreased yield per acre all over the United States as well as a possible decreased yield per acre in European countries. Because of its high gluten content rye will make good yeast raised bread. This is the reason that in the rationing process, rye is not sold as a substitute for wheat. Its food value is almost the same as wheat. It contains an active principle which is not good for the digestion if used continuously as the only starchy food, and is, therefore, not as desirable as wheat. But used as a part of the ration with plenty of vegetables and potatoes, it has no bad effects. Therefore the man who produces a bushel of rye has contributed to victory as much as the man who has produced a bushel of wheat.

Month	Wheat	Rye
January	$2.019	$1.703
February	2.012	1.748
March	2.027	1.910
April	2.026	2.351
May	2.026	2.211
June	2.025	1.876

The indications are that rye prices will hold up to the two dollar mark until the war is over.

Rye as a Stock Food

Rye does not feed from the bin as well as wheat, being harder and smaller grained. Horses fed on rye will stall quicker on rye than on wheat; but when ground fine and fed with rolled barley, oats, corn meal, alfalfa meat, or finely cut hay of any kind it is next to ground wheat in food value. So no matter what the demand for human consumption, its market as a stock feed is assured.

Rye as Pasture

As winter pasture, rye is so far beyond any other, in the San Joaquin valley, that it is in a class by itself. It is the grain grown in Alaska, Iceland, Lapland and the other fringes of the frigid zones. It will grow faster in cold weather, and with less moisture than any other grain. Its crown is so constructed that pasturing seems actually to be a benefit to it. If it can be irrigated it is safe to pasture as late as April first. Before that time, in a favorable winter, several tons of green feed will be furnished by each acre.

Rye as a Fertilizer

On clay land it is a very good plan to cut the rye high and turn under the stubble, and because of the great length of straw it will thus provide more humus than any other grain. Hogs and turkeys will pick up any fallen or shattered grain and add to the fertilizing elements. Rye straw run through a cutting machine and fed with alfalfa meal and grain will answer well for roughage and is readily the most nutritious of all the straws, but is not so well liked in England, the racers and hunters are fed rye straw for their roughage, it being a common belief that it is the best to preserve their "wind." As stock feed it will again add to the grain fertility.

The Poor Land Crop

A great deal of the land that was in grain this year will not raise wheat, barley or oats again next year; but by careful preparation this fall will grow an excellent crop of rye. The ground should be plowed deeply and then worked down with weighted disks run almost straight, until capillarity is established.

Sandy land that will almost never make a good crop of wheat will usually grow a good crop of rye. The ground that will grow good Thompsons can be depended upon to grow rye. The earlier it is sown after the ground is moist the better. If the winter is warm and wet the rye should either be pastured or cut and fed or made into silage, to prevent its heading out in frosty weather. Rye can be expected to produce about ten centals per acre as an average yield. It often doubles that yield and it responds to good treatment. As a fertilizer superphosphate is undoubtedly the best for use in this county. With commercial fertilizer twenty centals is often raised.

Rye in Alfalfa

Old alfalfa fields sown to rye will produce an enormous amount of feed. If pastured close till warm weather and irrigated, it may be necessary to carry some of the hay into the next field in order to cure it. It is sometimes advisable to pasture just as long as it is possible to keep it eaten down. This will run the first cutting into hotter weather when it is more easily cured.

How Much Seed

Sixty pounds seems to be sufficient in California where the long growing season gives it ample time to "stool" or spread its crown. Pasturing aids in the stooling or thickening process. As a rule poor land will produce more grain on a less amount of seed, than to heavy seeding.

It is economical to use a drill in seeding; from ten to twenty per cent of the seed may be saved. Drilled grain usually starts better as it can be put down to the proper depth which varies according to conditions, from one to two inches.

Diseases and Pests

In California rye has no insect enemies that affect it seriously. It has one disease affecting it some years, more disastrously than other grains that is ergot. To combat ergot, the seed should be given a bath of salt water, composed of forty pounds of salt in twenty-five gallons of water. The rye sinks and the ergot floats and is skimmed off. After eliminating the ergot spores it should be given the usual bath for smut—either formaldehyde or bluestone.

Rye is less susceptible to leaf rust and stem rust than the other grains and endures irrigation well. On account of the length of straw it is more apt to "lodge" when ripe. It should therefore be cut as soon as ready.

Fine Hen Has Growth on Eye

Fresno Republican Farm Editor:

Dear Sir—I am writing you for information regarding poultry.

I have a few thoroughbred Plymouth Rock hens. One is getting a growth on the side of her head in front of her eye. Is there any cure for her? If so, will you kindly inform me what to do. Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Yours truly,
C. A. TREADLINE.
(Care Beef Stall) Coalinga, Cal.

Answer by Dr. John M. Mcenna, Fresno.

The growth would need a more complete description for a diagnosis. The growth may be a tumor, and while likely to be a danger to the individual, would not endanger the flock.

CALIFORNIA FRUITS AND COTTON.

Apples.—The condition of apples is 74, compared with 82 one year ago and a ten-year average of 80. Early apples in the Watsonville district are light, but late apples are about an average crop, making the condition somewhat less than the average for the past ten years. The total production is estimated to be 4,816,000 bushels, compared to a production of 5,592,000 bushels (December estimate) in 1917.

Peaches.—But slight change is noted in the condition of the peach crop, 74, compared to 75 August 1; 81 on September 1, 1917, and a ten-year average of 83. Reports by districts are as follows: Santa Clara, 76; Sacramento, 75; San Joaquin, 71, and Southern California, 64. The San Joaquin valley produces 57 per cent of the total crop of the state. The total production is estimated to be 12,786,000 bushels, compared to (December estimate) 14,157,000 bushels last year.

PEARS.—The pear crop does not promise quite as well as last year, but better than the ten-year average. Condition is 83, on September 1, 1917, 90 and a ten-year average of 82.

Cotton.—On August 25, the condition of cotton in California was 92, compared to 90 one year ago and an eight-year average of 95. The crop in the Imperial valley is reported to be in fine condition, where a large acreage of volunteer cotton is being rapidly picked. At Blythe, on the Colorado river, Riverside county, some 12,000 acres of cotton, of which 75 per cent is short staple, are in excellent condition. About 3,000 acres of Egyptian cotton was planted in Fresno, Kings and Kern counties this year. These plantings were generally made quite late, and on account of seed planted too deep, with low temperatures in May and June, a poor stand was obtained. Considerable of the acreage has already been abandoned and it is doubtful if even 50 per cent of the acreage planted will be picked.

Short staple cotton near Chico though planted late is reported in fair condition.

Prior to September 1, 1,074 bales of cotton had been ginned in California.

Boys and Girls Enlist to Aid Egg Production

United States Department of Agriculture
Special Information Bureau.

Thousands of girls and boys of the United States have enlisted with Uncle Sam as poultry raisers. The Bureau of Animal Industry United States Department of Agriculture, co-operates with many state agricultural colleges to assist juvenile farmers in poultry husbandry.

The girls and boys of today will show an interest in better poultry husbandry by becoming successful members of the poultry clubs will be our breeders, judges and poultry producers of tomorrow. The splendid development of poultry clubs marks this line of work as one of the most important in the poultry office of the Department of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

Poultry Clubs Started in a Small Way.

Poultry club work was started in Virginia in 1912 with eleven clubs and 175 members. From this small beginning the organization has developed to include eleven states with 1,610 clubs in 300 counties and a membership of about 15,000 energetic boys and girls. Successful results have encouraged still other states through the Smith-Lever fund to carry on work of a similar nature in co-operation with the Bureau of Animal Industry, but this club history covers only the states in which a poultry specialist assigned to each state has supervision of the work and furnishes the subject matter to carry it on. The organized states are: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Kansas, Washington, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Several new states have requested the assistance of a specialist in their poultry club efforts for the coming year.

Educational Features Important.

Girls and boys are assisted in their work by local school teachers, county farm agents and county home demonstrators. Many of the members live in the country and help in the development of the farm flock by the introduction of standard bred stock, improvement of housing and feeding methods and marketing conditions. Other members who live in towns maintain backyard poultry plants, and all aid materially in production of poultry and eggs.

Poultry clubs have their educational feature and are carried on so that the boys and girls have an opportunity to learn simple business methods. Club members study poultry bulletins furnished by the state and government, and subject matter prepared by the specialists. The members write compositions on poultry management as a part of their work. Each member keeps a record, or business account, showing accurate figures on expenditures, receipts and profits, number of eggs set, number of chickens raised, etc.

Results Obtained by Club Members.

During the year 1917 these boy and girl club members hatched 98,273 chicks and raised 80,310 matured fowls. Over $17,907.25 worth of poultry and eggs for market and breeding purposes were sold or consumed at home, and the total value of their receipts, stock on hand, and prizes won amounted to $41,312.42. In addition to the exhibits of fowls and eggs made at county fairs and other poultry shows, these poultry club members are now demonstrating in many instances their ability to judge poultry and to carry on the various phases of poultry work, such as setting hens, operating an incubator, preserving eggs, caponizing cockerels, killing and dressing fowls for market. There were 101 exhibits held where 624 members exhibited 6,280 birds and 339 dozens of eggs. The total value of special and cash prizes awarded to the members making these exhibits amounted to $3,-000.75.

Features of Poultry Club Work.

Another feature of poultry club work that has been inaugurated is that of holding short courses at various state schools and colleges for the benefit of poultry club members who have made a good showing in their work. On such occasions members are sent to one of the state schools with all expenses paid and there given a course of instruction in poultry. Such courses not only provide a valuable course of instruction, but promote the various forms of amusement in a more favorable altitude toward education and what the social side of farm life can be made to be. Another feature that is being taken up is poultry management contests. These contests are conducted by the poultry club agents and seemingly are going to arouse much enthusiasm among the club members and will be the means of their obtaining a most practical course of instruction and the proper methods of handling and caring for poultry.

Girls' and boys' poultry clubs are a proved instrument of value in the forward movement in nation-wide poultry culture, not only on account of the very satisfactory development, but more especially in the manifest enthusiasm displayed by the boys and girls.

Exercise Care in Drying Figs

Be sure figs for drying are thoroughly ripe. If they are picked, set all the stem with the fruit. The better way is to let them drop or to wait until they are ripe enough to shake from the tree. Place on trays and expose to the sun for two or three days.

The Adriatic and Smyrna are the varieties for commercial drying. Sulphuring will improve their appearance and enhance the keeping qualities and freedom from insects. If Smyrnas are properly handled they should not require sulphuring.

Sun Dried

After sulphuring, dry Adriatics in full sun, from one to three days, depending on the humidity and heat. Smyrnas are best dried in partial shade or by stacking in trays so as to permit free circulation of air. Over-dried figs are tough, woody and inferior.

Sort Culls

Sort out bird pecked and split fruit. Dump dried fruit into flat or coarse screen bottom boxes and immerse and wash for twenty minutes in cold water containing four ounces of salt to the gallon. Then spread out for final drying for half a day in the sun.

Sweating

After final drying, place in piles on clean floor to sweat for two weeks. Turn the piles over two or three times with a shovel to equalize sweating and final texture. Following this treatment the figs are ready for market and may be packed or stored for later packing.

Missouri Figs

Missouri figs may be dried the same as Adriatics, though they are generally sold fresh at better profit. The Missouri figs are not always sulphured.

For home use a good practice is to dip the figs before packing in boiling water containing one pound of sugar and one-fourth pound of salt to the gallon. Leave in this then hot syrup ten minutes off the stove, then drain for two hours in open air and pack tight.

Sunshine Source of Growth

By Luther Burbank

How few people are aware of the scientific fact that all food and all clothing without any exception is first produced by the action of sunlight on the foliage of plants, and that but for the wonderful chemical changes installed in the foliage of plants, no life could exist on the earth, and only upon the improvements which have been made in plants has our present civilization been made possible.

Ten years ago it was becoming evident to every American who had a clear vision of the trend of events that the constantly accelerating movement of the producers of food from the farms to the cities must result sooner or later in greatly increased prices, and the consequent suffering which always accompanies a loss of balance between production and consumption.

Faced Starvation

This awful war into which most of the world has been plunged has now made this menacing condition all too evident to everybody. What has to be done? Starvation was paralyzing the arms and taking the lives of our Allies over the seas, and the owners of gardens, orchards and farms were called upon to quicken every nerve to meet the deficiency while those who were most able and who had most helped in the production of food were needed in the aid of our allies defenders for the right to live in peace upon the earth.

Conserve and Produce

Those who cultivated the soil could hardly do much more than they were already doing, and it was becoming evident that food which had before been taken as a matter of course was the foundation of all life, all knowledge, all progress. What could be done? First, carefully conserve what had already been produced, then produce more. Agriculture and horticulture had not generally been taught in the schools and the old "hit or miss" plan of farming was all too common; the home garden was neglected and the school garden a novelty. How quickly have the people of America changed their attitude, how splendidly have they made good by adapting themselves to the new conditions.

Some six or eight years ago prizes were offered to the pupils of the schools of Santa Rosa for the best gardens, the interest generally manifested by the pupils was encouraging, but not general, but when the National War Garden Commission under the leadership of Charles Lathrop Pack, came into action, the problem of food production was on the way to be solved, and today there are in California three probably 100 well kept, productive home gardens, where there were one or two before, and the interest in these war gardens has increased almost to a passion.

Cantonment Gardens

One of the greatest examples to this people as to what can be done in raising food close to the point of consumption is the commission's 400 acre garden at Camp Dix, N. J., for the 45,000 soldiers Colonel J. S. Fair, assistant to the acting quartermaster general of the army, now has under way gardens at many of the other camps.

Home and school gardens are now engaging the attention of all, and to the joys of producing a supply of delicious fresh fruits and vegetables is added a new and healthful sport, that discarefully neglected weed patch, unwholesome backyard or brick and rubish covered lot is now teeming with life, growth and beauty. Gardening naturally appeals to most children, and if properly and intelligently presented the exercise is not monotonous, but is varied and therefore healthful.

Soldiers of the Soil

A little while ago I was requested to visit the city of Oakland to inspect their school gardens, and though the work has been progressing only a few months the results are most remarkable. Thousands of pupils have a space allotted to each, and the pride and interest manifested by the young "soldiers of the soil" is appealing, and several of them are making good money" to buy thrift stamps and help in many other ways. Besides the school gardens there are over 21,000 home gardens—many of them true models of skill and care.

Alameda, another "bay city," has even a better start. Los Angeles has 14,000 school children daily engaged in the cultivation of 10,000 war gardens occupying an area in the city of nearly 2,000 acres; and San Francisco, Sacramento, Fresno, Stockton, Santa Rosa, Santa Barbara, and most other cities, towns and villages are fully awake and aware with countless productive school and home gardens, altogether making some 200,000 special California war gardens now producing food, and if food is to win the war California's emergency war gardens will speak loudly in the chorus of national war gardens in striving to feed a hungry world.

STORIES OF SPIES

By Albert Payson Terhune

No. 55: Louis Bril, Spy and German Spy-Killer.

He was a thin, under-sized, yellow-haired, blue-eyed Belgian, still in the early twenties. He was a thrifty, hard-working little chap whose one recreation was chess.

His name was Louis Bril and he lived in Brussels.

Just before the war broke out, in 1914, he was in Paris. But he had come back to Brussels to see his parents at the time German's iron fist seized his country by the throat.

Louis at once offered his services for the army. For some reason he was not accepted as an active soldier. But the government, none the less, made use of him.

He slipped through the cordon of steel and got in Paris on a secret mission.

It was while he was living, in hiding, in the city of his birth, that news came of the execution of Edith Cavell. On the heels of those tidings came the rumor that the gallant little Englishwoman had been betrayed to her death by a renegade Belgian—the blackguard known as "Van der Blank," whose story I have already told.

He Swears to Kill the Traitor.

At first the betrayer's name was not known. But this did not lessen the hatred that blazed up against him in the narrow chest of Louis Bril. Louis swore to track down the man to avenge Miss Cavell's death.

The German general, von Bissing, in command at Brussels, had been making life a torture for the Belgians. His most drastic proclamation had been that any man found with firearms in his possession would be at once put to death.

In spite of this warning and in spite of von Bissing's horde of spies, young Louis Bril always carried a couple of little automatic pistols with him. His line of work compelled him to protect himself one night as he was playing chess with a friend. Bril whipped out these pistols and announced:

"One of the bullets in these is for the man who betrayed Edith Cavell. I shall never rest until I kill him."

It does not matter how or when Louis Bril discovered Van der Blank's identity as the man who had caused Edith Cavell's death. It is said that suspicion first rested on Van der Blank when he was seen buying champagne for two actresses at an expensive cafe the day after his victim's execution. He was known to be hard up, and people began to conjecture how he had suddenly become so flush.

At any rate, Louis became convinced that Van der Blank was the guilty man. And he began to shadow him. This was not an easy process, for Bril himself was in hiding and dared not stir abroad until nightfall. And Van der Blank seemed to know he was followed, for he stuck to the most brightly lighted and crowded streets in his evening walks.

But Louis persisted. And at last he hit on a way of getting the betrayer into his power.

Early one evening Van der Blank received a perfumed note in a feminine hand asking him to be at a certain dark street at 9 o'clock that night.

Following the Trail of Suspect.

The lure was too strong for the victim's prudence. He went to the address named in the note.

A few hours later he was found by the police lying dead in the mud of the street, with two automatic pistol balls in his body.

The Belgian police took no steps at all toward arresting his slayer. So apathetic were they that in a week or two the German authorities took the case out of their hands.

It was necessary for the peace of mind and the efficiency of Germany's other local spies that this mysterious spy-killer be tracked down and punished.

When the Belgians had failed, the Germans succeeded. They got on Bril's trail. One night as he was returning to his room some plainclothes men sought to seize him.

Bril broke away and fled into a house and up to its roof, the police close behind him. He made a twelve-foot leap to the house next door. The police dared not follow across the chasm, so they merely emptied their pistols after the fugitive.

For the moment, Louis got away. But soon afterward he was captured. He was tried by courtmartial and was condemned to die.

The next morning he was shot to death in the prison courtyard.

"I want to know," said the grim-faced woman, "how much money my husband drew out of the bank last week." "I cannot give you that information, madam," answered the man in the cage. "You're the paying teller, aren't you?" "Yes, but I'm not the telling payer."—Boston Transcript.

Designed for Long Service

Model D is constructed of only the highest grade material. The motor, a heavy duty overhead valve type, is bolted direct to the transmission, with a bell housing, which completely encloses the fly wheel and clutch. The transmission consists of hardened cut steel gears running on shafts, mounted on nickel steel roller bearings. All gears, both in transmission and main drive are enclosed in dust housings and run in oil baths. All parts of the machine are readily accessible.

The Bates Model D Suitable for All Kinds of Work

The Bates Tractor will pull four ten-inch plows from eight to ten inches deep, depending on the soil conditions. This is a practical tractor for grain farming, as it will pull five ten-inch plows five to six inches deep for grain and will plow twelve acres per day. For vineyard work, on account of its being only fifty-five inches wide and able to turn short, it is the most practical tractor on the market at the present time. This tractor will pull sixty inches of right and left hand plows for plowing out vineyard rows at once through.

We now have a Model D Bates on our floor. Let us show you this tractor or send you a catalogue.

THE "SERIOUS" AGE.

I hope that the modern schoolboy is not carrying the new seriousness of life to the point of priggishness, though I must say I was rather alarmed by a conversation I heard on a car yesterday between a boy of, perhaps, 14, who had apparently been collecting his sister of a year younger from the station on arrival from school. He was talking about some friend of his. "Yes," he said, "she's awfully boyish still, though he's twelve now, and I don't care for him very much. As I tell him, at his age he ought to be getting more serious." His sister dutifully agreed; but I was relieved when she added, "I can't say you tell us bits at tea now!" Westminster Gazette.

"I understand Jim is a young man of great promise." "So he is. That is why he is being sued for breach of it. Baltimore American.

in this valley but we can't farm it alone. Don't wish for a farm, come and get it. Why talk patriotism? Do something. If you can't fight you can farm foodstuff. Don't leave it all for the other man. Do your bit. Uncle Sam stands by you. Why not stand by him? He pays the highest prices. You want a good farm. You can have one on half crop payments; live well and own it in one-half the time you could before the war. Let me show you.

20,172 REGISTER IN COUNTY AND CITY

County Boards Contribute Exactly 12,000 Registrants

Totals Exceed Estimates of Government Officials

With the completion of the counting of the men between the ages of 18 and 45 years by the Fresno county exemption boards yesterday added to the number registered in Fresno city a total of 20,172 men is shown as the gift of Fresno city and county towards the man power of the country to resist the claims of Germany.

Executive Secretary Roy Marshall of the county exemption boards reported that the county, through both exemption boards, gave a total of exactly 13,000 registrants.

The returns were made up as follows:

County Exemption Board No. 1.

Native born and naturalized citizens	4,085
Declarant aliens	322
Non-Declarant aliens	1,421
Whites	5,548
Negroes	45
Total registrations	5,593

County Exemption Board No. 2.

Native born and naturalized citizens	3,166
Declarant aliens	299
Non-Declarant aliens	2,662
Whites	4,593
Negroes	25
Total registrations	6,131

Of these registrations a total of 1,254 are included from outside boards. The totals are far in excess of the estimates made, Secretary Marshall said. He accounted for the large number registered in the county by the fact that so many persons from other parts were engaged in the fruit harvest in the county. Of the city registrations 750 are to be included as circus employes who happened to be in the city on registration day.

REGISTRATION FIGURES SHRINK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Provost Marshal General Crowder tonight had not received complete figures from a single state on the registration Thursday of men between 18 and 45, but partial returns were received during the day from draft officials compiling the district reports.

Reports coming to the provost marshal general today from the more populous centers of the country led members of his staff to revise downward their estimate yesterday that the total number of men registered might reach 14,000,000.

Returns from some New York districts indicated that the enrollment there might produce only 96 per cent of the estimate before registration day, and it also was said that Chicago, Detroit and other large cities were running slightly below the totals expected. Officials said this falling off in the figures might offset the excess in incomplete returns yesterday from ten states, where registration was running 3.5 per cent over the estimate. The final results, officials concluded, might show a registration not very far above or below the first estimate of 13,000,000. The calculations were watched closely by General Crowder's staff, since the total registration available is one of the factors influencing sharply their work of mobilizing the army's new accretions.

NEED OF LOCOMOTIVES.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Sept. 14.—Employes of railroad machine shops and roundhouses over the country were urged today by William G. McAdoo, director general of railroads, to speed up repairing of locomotives so that General Pershing can have the new ones now building, which, he said, are needed "to make certain the defeat of the Kaiser."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—An official dispatch from France today says it is reported that Prince Henry Charles of Hesse has accepted the crown of Finland.

VOTE NO AMENDMENT 21

Amendment 21 If Passed

Will open California's doors to any dentist in the United States to practice, without examination of any kind.

This will flood the state with every failure in other states who can raise the railroad fare.

Let us try to keep the high standard of dentistry in California which has to be met before a dentist can practice here. There are enough "rotten," incompetent dentists in the state now.

Your teeth are your best friends, so why abuse them? Decayed teeth are unsightly and unhealthy.

Take them in time and you will save both your teeth and money, as well as suffering.

My methods of operating are as nearly painless as it is possible for the most scientific dentists in the country to make it so.

My reputation as a dentist for the past 15 years has been one of which I am justly proud. My motto is "The cheapest and the best." I guarantee my work and I am here to stay. The best is what you want, and I am at your service.

Save your teeth.
I will help you.

My prices are reasonable and consistent with first-class dentistry.

No charge for examination and an estimate.

Call and let me look your teeth over and learn the truth before having any dental work done.

TEETH WITHOUT PLATES

The replacement of lost teeth without the use of a plate is one of the most scientific parts of modern dentistry and although not understood in all its details by the average dentist, it is playing a very important part in modern dentistry.

I have a system by which I replace your lost teeth without a plate if you have two or more teeth in either jaw, and I guarantee that they are there to stay and feel as natural as your own teeth.

CROWNS

This work is done in both Gold and Porcelain.

The Porcelain, or white teeth, renew those in front and are so closely matched that they cannot be detected from your own natural teeth and are just as serviceable.

A good root with a Gold Crown is the same as your own tooth and will last as long as you live.

We put on Crowns as low as $5 and for all other dental work we charge proportionately low prices.
